WILL ASK RECOUNT IN MAINE

Although defeated by 763 votes in the effort to keep the prohibition clause in the State constitution, Maine prohibition leaders are determined that the liquor issue in that State shall again go before the people for popular vote. Charges that politics were used to befog the real issue are made to-day.

At 8 a. m. to-day fourteen towns had not been heard from, and without these towns the vote stood:

For repeal	60,721
Against repeal	59,958

This gave a majority of 763 for the repeal of the prohibitory amendment to the State constitution.

Colonel Fred N. Dow, son of the late General Neal Dow, the father of the Maine prohibitory law, said to-day: "The liquor victory was brought about through the co-operation of the major part of the Republican machine with the Democratic organization. Th Republicans hoped to embarrass the Democrats when they have to frame a new liquor law and so split the party that there will be a Republican victory in 1912."

Charge Political Plot

"A political plot defeated us," declared prominent prohibition leaders to-day.

While awaiting the result of the official count and a recount which is to be asked for by the prohibitionists, the prohibition leaders will not be idle. They have already begun work tending towards the drawing up of papers to secure 12,000 signatures for a petition to the Legislature demanding a popular vote on the question of legalizing the sale of liquor. There will be no difficulty in securing these signatures, and the Legislature will then be compelled to name a day for a special election.

The popular vote will then decide the question as to whether Maine shall have prohibition, local option or other license law. Thus the people can sustain or veto the act of the Legislature.

The vote in Maine had not itself changed conditions throughout the State and the sale of liquor anywhere in the State is still against the law. The liquor victory simply takes out of the Constitution of Maine the provision forbidding the sale of liquor. There still remains on the statute books of Maine a law, now fifty-six years old, which forbids the sale of liquor.

Opens Way for Legislature.

The vote opens the way for the Legislature to pass a local option law, which would allow cities and towns to decide whether or not liquor should be sold within the State border. The present Legislature, now adjourned, is supposed to be in favor of such a law, and the Governor is expected to call a special session and attempt to put a local option law on the statute books.

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens, national president of the W. C. T. U. and leader of the prohibition movement in Maine, said to-day:

Mrs. Stevens's Statement.

"I do not believe, in face of the vote on taking prohibition out of the State Constitution, that the dominant party in aMine to-day will dare to call the Legislature in session. The vote, which shows a majortly for the repeal of the constitutional clause by only 500 votes, is not a mandate of the people. I know that there are over 500 men in Maine to-day who favored taking the prohibition clause from the State Constitution, but who still favor State-wide prohibition.

"If the dominant party shoul deall a special session of the Legislature and the matter is put up to the people for a popular vote I am positive that there would be a pronounced victory for statutory prohibition.

Norton's Statement.

George W. Norton, secretary of the Maine State Committee on the No-License movement, with headquarters at Portland, told the AMERICAN over the long-distance telephone this noon that the committee will probably ask for a recount of the vote in some Maine places on the prohibition repeal question. Mr. Norton said:

"Our returns show a small 'wet' majority of about 500. The chances are that the final result will be between 500 and 600 for the 'Wets.'

"On the face of the returns, so far, we concede a 'wet' victory of between 500 and 600.

"We may ask for a recount. The committee, which includes sixteen members or one for each county, is holding telephone conferences to-day as fast as possible. It is difficult to bring the committeemen together for a personal conference to-day, they are so scattered.

"The telephone conference to-day is on the question of asking for a recount. It is not settled yet, but quite probably we shall ask for a recount of part of the vote at least. No, I am not prepared to say yet what sections we shall ask to have recounted, if we do ask it."

Asked how the Committee on No-License Movement feels to-day, Secretary Norton replied emphatically:

"Well, as for me, I am not discouraged a bit. I am just as full of fight as ever."

If the result of the vote, whether recounted or not, is a "Wet" victory, the Committee on No-License Movement is ready to tackle the next problem, that of keeping the prohibition law on the Maine statutes.

"Naturally, we are ready to fight any effort to repeal that staute," said Secretary Norton.

After an all-night vigil at headquarters in Portland, Adam P. Leighton, president of the No-License League, after a long conference with members of the committee, said

KATHERINE BAXTER, TO BE THE BRIDE OF RUSSELL BURRAGE

Boston society is very much interested in the engagement of Miss Katherine Baxter of Knoxville, Tenn., to Mr. Russell Burrage of Boston. Mr. Burrage is the son of Mr. A. C. Burrage of Commonwealth avenue, who, because of his connections with the late Henry H. Rogers and Standard Oil interests, has often been called "the richest man in New England."

Miss Baxter is the daughter of former Governor and Mrs. George W. Baxter of Knoxville and is the sister of Mrs. Cornelia Baxter Tevis McKee. The Baxter sisters are famous for their beauty.

When Mr. Burrage's fiancee becomes his wife she will be a notable woman in Boston society. Her beauty, grace tact and wealth ought to give her leadership on the Back Bay, the North Shore or in any circle in whiche she elects to move.

Mr. Burrage is a Harvard men and when in his sophomore year in Cambridge caused the arrest of a person who was accused of trying to sell fake college examination papers to students. Dean Hurlbut said at the time:

"I think Mr. Burrage deserves the highest credit for his action. Not only did he not yield in the slightest to the apparent temptation, but he did the first thing he could to apprehend the imposter.

ETNA VIOLENT, VILLAGERS FLEE

CATANIA, Sept. 11.—The eruption of Mount Etna has become more intense. The showers of ashes and cinders are heavier than they were yesterday, and the rumbling of earth shocks at short intervals is heard for miles around.

The shocks are growing in violence, and a panic prevails. The fear of the people is augmented by the great heat and the suffocating atmosphere. All the country around about is covered with ashes and seems under an immense pall.

A new fissure has opened above Linguaglossa, which lies at the foot of Etna, and brilliant flashes illuminate the thick column of smoke. Lava is now descending and threatens the villages. It has reached to the edge of the woods.

Fourteen new fissures have opened, and are emitting smoke, ashes and lava. It is reported that three new craters have been formed. Even the streets of Catania are covered with ashes.

The people of the villages on the slopes of Etna have abandoned their homes. Some of the houses have been damaged by the earthquakes, and hundreds of men, women and children who are without shelter go about from place to place, carrying pictures of the saints, crying and imploring mercy.

THIRTY MEN FLEE PROVIDENCE FIRE

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 12.—Thirty members of the Young Ladies' Halcyon Club fled from the third floor of the building at Nos. 228-232 Westminster street by the fire escapes when a fire in the basement sent smoke through the structure.

Only the assurances of two young men who were in another part of the building prevented several of them from jumping. Miss Margaret Carroll and her sister, Elizabeth, Miss Margaret Shannon and Arthur Hargraves, employed at Hyler's confectionery store at No. 230, were also out by the flames.

Henry S. Samuels's millinery stock was badly damaged and the total loss to the occupants of stores and offices in the building will reach $10,000.

Miss Esther Weisman was taken down a ladder by firemen from the third floor.

CARPENTERS' UNION CHIEF IN BOSTON

William D. Huber, international president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters of America, arrived in Boston to-day and registered at the Quincy House. To-morrow night he will address the representatives of twenty-seven local branches of the organization at a mass meeting to be held in Carpenters' Hall, No. 30 Hanover street. A number of matters having to do with labor conditions will be acted upon. William H. Walsh will preside.

FOWLER ABOVE SIERRAS

AUBURN, Cal., Sept. 12.—Robert G. Fowler, the first aviator to start a coast-to-coast flight for the prize of $50,000 offered by William Randolph Hearst, was ready to resume his flight toward Reno, Nev., long before 8 o'clock, the time set for his departure to-day. At dawn he began tuning up his engine and announced a few minutes later that everything was running perfectly, and that he would reach Reno at 10:30 o'clock.

From Reno the route led to Winnemucca by way of Fallon and Lovelock and on the way reaching the highest point of the Sierras at Summit, where he will be 7,000 feet above the sea.

Winnemucca is 292 miles from Auburn by rail, and Fowler expects to reach there by nightfall and remain there until to-morrow morning. If he does, he will be up with his schedule. The flight over the Sierra Nevada mountains is regarded as an accomplishment over which any aviator might be proud.

The remainder of the trip to New York is considered fairly easy. This view is shared by Fowler, who said to-day:

"Altitude is a thing cross continent aviators will have to contend with. I am a seasoned mountain climber and know the higher planes will not affect me. I expect to do it easily."

Fowler is carrying no food save a quart bottle of beef tea, a quart bottle of lemonade and a pocketful of chocolate wafers. He also carries a canteen of water for use in emergencies.

"I am not going to worry about special trains," he said. "I shall just fly along. But the trains will have to get busy. The one I passed yesterday didn't show much speed."

He expects to reach New York by October 7 and of the twenty-six days elapsed time he will travel twenty.

7,000 Feet in the Air.

Fowler started from the stadium in Golden Gate Park at 1:37 o'clock yesterday.

Last night, after making a stop at Sacramento, ninety miles from this city, the daring novice rested here in the shadows of the towering Sierras, just 129 miles from the spot where he took wing. To-day he essays the feat of vaulting the barrier, with its craggy pass rising 7,100 feet into the air, guarded on each side by peaks almost 15,000 feet high.

"Bob" Fowler started on his history-making flight with a confident grin on his boyish face. The spectacle was thrilling enough to make the most sluggish pulse beat faster. Of the 10,000 or more persons banked about the stadium and fluttering like flies about his airship, Fowler alone was unmoved.

The hand that reached out for the last handshakes was cool and steady. The eye that looked out over glittering levers to take a final glimpse of the upper air was clear and unblinking. By no tremor, gesture or fleeting glance did the boy betray a fear. He began his giant task with a lion's heart.

Crowd Cheers Tumultuously.

Ten thousand pairs of straining eyes watched Fowler start. The soft trade winds blowing in from the Pacific wafted up to him prayers for his success. The grace, the beauty and the cool certitude of his airship's first curving leap from the green earth awoke the crowd to a tumult of cheers, the murmur of which must have reached his ear above the high song of his motor.

Fowler, who a moment before had been a boy, with a boy's smile for every one and a boy's quick retort for every word, became swiftly and solemnly grave as he lifted that left hand to signal "Let go!"

With that simple motion he had thrown his young life into the scales. Undying fame and fortune, or—

Whatever took place in Fowler's mind at that supreme moment, it is certain that no fear entered there. He merely stopped grinning, so far as appearances went, and became grave, but he did not fuss. There was no farewell wave to the crowd, no grandstand play, no salute to the girls on the side lines.

No Play for Plaudits.

With this boy, who is deliberately playing his life as a stake in the great game of progress, it was business then, serious, momentous business.

There was no fuss or fritter at the start, none after he rose gracefully in the air. He cut no giddy circles for the plaudits of the crowd, and he did no dizzy dips to feed his vanity on the cheers.

Fowler went out after the great prize and the fame that will go with it without a suspicion of fancy work. He rose at an easy grade into a cloudless sky, a sky that seemed a lure and an invitation.

One straight rising sweep out until the edge of the Pacific sang under his planes and until his eyes could look out ahead on a vast harmony of blue sky merging into blue sea. Then a graceful turn. No bird could have spun around more lightly.

Then back, straight overhead, 800 feet over the throng gazing at the silvery under-sides of his planes. Over the crowd he flew on a line for his goal as straight as the course of a homing bee.

Rising slowly higher, swaying a little to the breeze, a floating thing of silver against the blue sky, the murmur of his motor still audible, like the echo of a song, he left the stadium and then the park behind him and clove his way through the air toward the bay.

Ward, Away on Hearst Flight To-morrow, and Wife

James J. Ward, who flies a Curtiss biplane, will make his start in the great $50,000 coast-to-coast flight from Governor's Island, in New York Bay. His wife is enthusiastic over his chances to win the big prize.

MELLEN PUZZLE STILL UNSOLVED

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Sept. 12.—It was said here to-day that President Charles S. Mellen had informed the directors of the New York, Hartford & New Haven Railroad tha they could have his resignation at any time they desired it. The press department promised a statement on this point later. The cut of the dividend from 8 to 6 per cent. is said to be at the bottom of the trouble.

The press department of the New Haven railroad, which yesterday issued an announcement that Charles S. Mellen was to retire as president of the road, which five hours later was followed by a statement by Mr. Mellen that he was not going to retire, stated to-day that nothing further could be said to clear up the mystery.

Mr. Mellen, himself, who is supposed to be in New Hampshire, seems to be the only person who can clear up the matter.

Business circles generally, and especially in New York, accepted the story as true and proceeded to hunt up a successor for Mr. Mellen. While Boston thought that Vice-President Byrnes would be the logical man, New York brought forward Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad—a Vermont man.

One thing may be said about the whole matter—that Charles S. Mellen has had the rare privilege of experiencing an answer to the lilting petition of Bobbie Burns, when he wrote:

"O, wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursels as ithers see us."

Mr. Mellen to-day, with such newspapers of the United States as he has been able to procure on his trip through New England, has seen himself as others see him.

They have discussed Mr. Mellen just as though he had quit the New Haven Railroad—just as though, indeed, he had quit this vale of trouble and journeyed with Charon across the dark river Styx in a craft that no monopolistic hand has ever been able to gobble.

And they have said some things that will make Mr. Mellen smile and some that will make him wince. Wall street bankers, for instance, said that they were sorry his resignation aws a joke. It was cited that within the past seven months Boston & Maine and New Haven stocks have depreciated the enormous sum of $38,000,000. New Haven is more than 18 points and Boston & Maine more than 19 points below the highest mark of the year.

New England men who have fought Mellen's merger proclivities said that now that competition is assured, Mellen wants to get out; that he is a man who shows to better advantage when he has a monopoly of the railroad business than he does when he is fought by competitors.

They have said that Mellen ran counter to his boss—Morgan—and that that caused the rift in the railroad lute. Mellen had promised that so long as he was at the head of the big New England railroad the New Haven would pay 8 per cent. It was a matter of pride with him. The road couldn't do it unless the people were gouged outrageously, and Morgan, beginning to see the power of the people in this country, told Mellen to cut the dividend to 6 per cent.

RUSTLERS OUT FOR TWO GAMES

BATTING ORDER.

NEW YORK.	BOSTON.
Devore, l.f.	Ingerton, 2b.
Doyle, 2b.	Bridwell, s.s.
Snodgrass, c.f.	Jackson, l.f
Murray, r.f.	Donlin, c.f.
Merkle, 1b.	Miller, r.f.
Herzog, 3b.	McDonald, 3b.
Fletcher, s.s.	Gowdy, 1b.
Meyers, c.	Rariden, c.
Mathewson, p.	Young, p.

After a four days' vacation, during which the Rustlers' box office suffered from too much rain, it looks like Fred Tenney's bunch of headliners will have a chance for some sport with the Giants in a double-header this afternoon.

This is the last National League series in Boston this year, and the schedule was fortunately framed up so that the Rustlers could close their home engagement with the leaders in the pennant chase. So big crowds will probably buy William Hepburn Russell's pasteboards to-day, to-morrow ond Thursday.

"Big Cy" Young will be the shining star in the Rustlers' outfit this afternoon. He is very likely to pitch the opening game, which will begin at 1:30 o'clock. Cy has had a good rest since he pitched his remarkable game against the Phillies last week. That was a great performance. The Quakers got but six hits off the veteran, but he never had a chance to win because Alexander the Great, in rare form, allowed the Rustlers but one hit, and that was the scratchiest sort of an effort. The Quakers did succeed in squeezing out one run, so the game goes down as a defeat for Cy. But nine times out of ten such pitching would win for Boston, and a team that had pitching like that all season would run so far away with the pennant that its dust could not be seen by the second club.

Cy Young is going so good that the Giants will take no chances. They need every game just now, because their margin of lead in the flag chase is so small that it would take very little to drop into second place. So McGraw will doubtless send Mathewson or Marquard against Cy Young, probably the former.

In the other contest, Tenney is puzzled, but "Hub" Perdue is in good form, and it is altogether likely that he will go after the bacon. The chances are that Ames or Drucke will be his opponent, if "Hub" is picked.

McGraw is eager to pick up all four of the Rustler games, but Tenney's men think they can stop the Giants' career just now. The Boston bunch have not been better all season, and they will give McGraw a run for his money.

These contests ought to be worth going to see. The Giants are going to put up some classy exhibitions of baseball just now. The Rustlers are eager to prove decisively to the public that there is nothing in the rumor that they are controlled by the New York syndicate and, as they can only do that by winning a few games, there should be two lively battles this afternoon.

ENGLAND MAKES DEFENSES READY

PARIS, Sept. 12.—France's reply to Germany's demands in Morocco, which is a flat refusal of them, was laid to-day before a special meeting of the French Cabinet for approval.

The reply is so sharp and prompt that instead of allaying the feeling of apprehension, has served to key the country to a high pitch of excitement.

France is wondering what the German Emperor will say to this refusal. The terms made by Germany were the result of long conferences and received the approbation of Kaiser William before they were forwarded to Paris.

It would appear as though Germany would have to back down in her demands, which are such as cannot be accepted by France and will not be accepted.

As the whole matter stands now, France is in the position of a dictator to Germany.

Bankers Urge Peace.

The general impression here is that the financial interests of Germany, which have already been crippled by the withdrawal of French help, will immediately take measures to force Germany to settle the trouble with France at almost any cost.

There is not the least doubt but that the present situation is fraught with greater peril than it has been at any time since the Moroccan cloud began to gather.

Garo of the association read his annual report.

Elaborate arrangements have been made for the stay of the Emperor and Empress, and $1,000,000 has been expended in paving and beautifying the "Mother of Russian Cities."

CHAINED TO STAKE, STUNG TO DEATH

BILOXI, Miss., Sept. 12.—Dead from hundreds of stings by mosquitoes and other insects, the body of W. M. Holly was found chained to a stake in a marsh near here to-day by hunters. Mystery surrounds the murder.

BOY DEAD, FIVE HURT BY AUTOS

A boy was killed and four men and a woman were injured—two of them fatally—in three automobile accidents which occurred a few minutes apart in Lynn and Chelsea to-day. The victims were:

KILLED.

FELIX C. CZCSNOVIRCZ, fourteen, No. 61 Broadway, Chelsea; run over in front of his house by an automobile owned by George H. Craft of Newton and driven by Edward H. Heoth of Newton; died in Frost Hospital.

FATALLY NJURED.

MRS. GRACE MORLEY, seventy, Pleasant street, Lynn; knocked down by stolen automobile driven by unknown man; shoulder ad hip fractured, probable internal injuries; on dangerous list at Lynn hospital.

DEXTER BLACKTHORNE, forty, Rutherford avenue, Charlestown; thrown from automobile owned and driven by A. W. Knight in Nahant street, Lynn; skull fractured; in Union Hospital, Lynn.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

A. W. Knight, No. 66 Mystic avenue, Somerville; bruised about head and body by overturning of his car in aNhant street, Lynn. In Union Hospital.

John J. Grady, forty-five, No. 89 Mystic avenue, Somerville; bruised about head and body in same accident. Union Hospital.

Richard Rinald, Somerville; bruised about head and body; same accident. Union Hospital.

Fourteen-year-old Felix C. Czesnovirez was playing in front of his house, at No. 61 Broadway, Chelsea. He left his playmates to run across the street. Half way over he stooped, picked up something and darted back. An automobile owned by George H. Crafft of Newton and driven by Crafft's chauffeur, Edward H. Heath, was approaching. Hath tried to stop his machine and to turn aside, but the boy was directly in his path. The lad was struck and knocked down, the left forward wheel passing over his body.

Race to the Hospital.

Heath stopped the car before the rear wheels touched the boy, jumped out and picked up the lad. The boy's mother, hearing the cries of the children, ran into the street and Heath put her in his machine and drove full speed to Chelsea police headquarters. A policeman leaped into the machine there and the party drove in haste to the Frost Hospital. The boy was dead before he arrived there.

Assistant Medical Examiner Walters said that the lad's death was caused by a fractured skull. His body was taken to North Grove street morgue and Heath was detained at Chelsea police headquarters, pending an investigation.

The accident to Mrs. Grace Morley occurred in Market street, Lynn. The victim, is well known in Lynn. She is seventy years old, and her home is in Pleasant street. At the last session of the Legislature she petitioned for an act remunerating her for confinement in Danvers Insane Hospital, claiming that she was sane when detained there. Friends had raised a fund to send her to Ireland, and she was to go in a few weeks.

It was the eagerness of an automobile thief to escape with a stolen machine that led to the disaster to Mrs. Morley. An unknown man ran down Broad street, jumped into a car in front of the Buick Automobile Company's store and made off with it. He was running it wildly through Market street when the aged woman was crossing. She was knocked down. The driver hurried off with the machine.

DEFENDER OF ASTOR RESIGNS; CRITICISM OF WEDDING IS UNABATED

While Colonel John Jacob Astor and his young bride, formerly Miss Madeleine Force, are passing their honeymoon to-day at Ferncliffe, the Astor estate at Rhinecliffe-on-Hudson, the clerical agitation over the wedding continues unabated. The burden of the ministerial opinion is criticism of this re-marriage of a man who has been divorced and of the Rev. Joseph Lambert of Providence, the Congregational clergyman, who performed the ceremony.

In the midst of this denunciation of the Astor marriage there comes, with particular significance, the resignation of the Rev. I. Newton Phelps from the pastorate of All Saints' Episcopal Church of Meriden, Ct. Dr. Phelps is the clergyman who objected to the wholesale criticism Colonel Astor and Miss Force were receiving and particularly to the severe arraignment of them by Dr. George Chalmers Richmond of Philadelphia. While Dr. Phelps does not say that his resignation is due to objection to his attitude on the part of his flock, that is the inference made by Meriden people.

Dr. Phelps gave no definite reason when he read his resignation Sunday, beyond that he feels it his duty and that he thinks his usefulness in that parish is at an end. Dr. Phelps is a personal friend of Colonel Astor. Recently he was asked what he thinks of the Astor case. He replied that, if he were in a position to decide, he would by no means consider performing the marriage.

"But," he added, "it is not my business nor the business of Dr. George Chalmers Richmond to vilify a man because he marries again. In regard to Dr. Richmond's denunciation of the marriage, I should call it a gratuitous insult to Colonel Astor."

Referring to Colonel Astor's choice of a bride Dr. Phelps said:

"Mr. Astor has chosen a most beautiful young woman and I admire his good taste and sound judgment."

Bitter Comments Made.

These emphatic statements by the Meriden cleric drew widespread attention. Now Dr. Phelps has suddenly resigned, merely saying that his usefulness in All Saints' parish is at an end. People in Meriden think that his parishioners have taken umbrage at his "defence of Astor," as some call it.

On the Sunday following the wedding many clergymen attacked the marriage directly or indirectly. The Congregational and Episcopal clergymen were particularly prominent. The former feel that the Congregational faith is discredited because the ceremony was performed by a member of their creed. The latter are sensitive to the fact, as they have been from the first, that Colonel Astor is an Episcopalian.

One of the most bitter comments, however, comes from a Providence clergyman, Dr. Edward Holyoke, pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church of that city. He said in the course of a sermon: "Money buys anything now, even a divorce or a minister."

The Providence Ministers' Association is planning a special meeting at which resolutions condemning the Astor wedding will be offered.

Lambert Former Weaver.

Since the marriage there has been considerable inquiry as to the clerical history of the Rev. Joseph Lambert, pastor of the Elmwood Temple Congregational Church of Providence, who married Colonel Astor. He was formerly a weaver in the Wampanoag Mills, Fall River. He still has a brother and sister living in the Flint Village section of that city. Rev. Mr. Lambert's brother, Zachariah, is a weaver in the Barnard Mills. His sister is the wife of James Kidd, Thomas street, Fall River, also a weaver. His father was one of the pioneer settlers of Flint Village. For many years he was a weaver, and later entered the liquor business.

Rev. Mr. Lambert was a weaver until fifteen years ago, when he decided to enter the ministry. While in the mills he was an active member of Bogel Street Christian Church and conducted a Sunday School class there, although he was never a lay preacher, according to the statements of members. In 1899 he became a student at the Christian Biblical Institute, New York, from which he was graduated four years later.

He held one pastorate and then became a Congregationalist, his first pastorate in this faith being at Portsmouth. It was while there that he was said to have been acquainted with the Vanderbilts.

The Berkshire Ministers' Club, meeting at Pittsfield, has unanimously adopted a resolution of protest against the marriage.

Berkshire Ministers Protest.

The resolution was presented by Rev. George Wakeman Andrews of Dalton and was seconded by Rev. Warren S. Archibald, pastor of the Pilgrim Memorial Church, Pittsfield. It reads as follows:

> The members of the Berkshire Ministers' Club and guests present at this meeting desire to put themselves on record as disapproving the marriage, in another State, of a man forbidden by the courts of a sister State to remarry.
>
> We express regret at the debasing of the ministerial office and the stigma brought upon the denomination of Christians to which he belongs. If clergymen defy the just requirements of the civil courts they set an example that is fatal to our well-being as a nation and destructive of good morals.

Members of the Newport Ministers' Union at their next meeting will adopt formal resolutions to the effect that no one of their number shall perform a marriage, one of the proposed parties to which has been divorced, according to Rev. Stanley C. Hughes, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, president of the body.

"As the clergy stand here to-day there is not a member of any denomination who would perform such a ceremony, but the meeting will include the new additions to the Newport clergy pledged not to perform a marriage ceremony wherein either party has been divorced, whether he be the innocent party or not," said Rev. Mr. Hughes.

Infant Protection Congress in Berlin.

BERLIN—The third international Congress for the Protection of Infants was opened under the auspices of the German Empress and of high government officials. Delegates of eighteen foreign nations presented greetings from peoples and governments. The greetings of the United States were offered by Nathan Straus of New York. Mr. Straus to-day addressed the congress on "Twenty Years' Practical Experience in Modifying and Pasteurizing Milk for Infant Feeding."

Big Deficit on France Roads.

PARIS—The report of the Western State Railroad issued shows that government control of transportation in France is costly. The figures for this year indicate a deficit of 66,000,000 francs, or $13,200,000, against 24,000,000 francs, or $4,800,000, for the preceding year. The report estimates the cost of overhauling and renewing the system at 545,000,000 francs, or $109,000,000.

Play "The Ogre" in London.

LONDON—Henry Arthur Jones's new play, "The Ogre," with Sir George Alexander and Miss Kate Cutler in the leading roles, was produced at the St. James's Theatre. The impression of the press is that the play is below Mr. Jones's standard and that while there are plenty of laughs, they are not hearty enough to make the play a success.

Break Steamship Pool.

HAMBURG—The passenger pool of continental and English steamship lines doing business with Brazil and Argentina has been dissolved. The dissolution terminates existing arrangements between English, Dutch and German lines regarding business for English, Dutch and German ports on September 30.

To Recognize Portugal.

LISBON—Word has been received here that Great Britain, Germany, Austria, Spain and Italy have decided that the Portuguese republic is sufficiently established to warrant formal recognition by the powers. These governments have agreed to recognize the republic simultaneously without delay.

Edisons Going to Berlin.

PARIS—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Edison, with their two sons and daughter, now at Vienna, are going by automobile to Berlin. They start for America on September 19.

LONDON—Advices from the Continent say that former President Diaz of Mexico has arrived at Ems for the purpose of taking the cure.

PASSENGERS QUIT BURNING STEAMSHIP

LONDON, Sept. 12.—Fire broke out to-day upon the steamer Papanui, bound for Australia with 347 emigrants on board, off the coast of St. Helena, according to dispatches received by Lloyds. The fire gained such headway that all the passengers on board the steamer were landed in small boats. All were reported safe.

MAINE VOTES REPEAL, BUT PROHIBITIONISTS WILL ASK FOR RECOUNT

that a recount would be asked. George W. Norton, secretary of the No-License Campaign Committee, announced to-day that he had doubt as to the correctness of the unofficial figures. He claimed a victory for the prohibition party by fifty votes, basing his figures on returns secured by the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company.

Newspapers throughout the State have conceded a victory to the anti-prohibition party. Unless there is some glaring error in tabulation discovered to-day they claim the Prohibition party has been defeated.

Figures by Counties.

The returns secured by the Self-Governing League show the majorities in each county as follows:

	Yes.	No.
Androscoggin	2,417	...
Aroostook	...	1,988
Cumberland	1,915	...
Franklin	...	963
Hancock	252	...
Kennebec	362	...
Knox	431	...
Lincoln	...	302
Oxford	...	985
Penobscot	2,436	...
Piscataquis	...	806
Sagadahoc	236	...
Somerset	...	1,200
Waldo	295	...
Washington	...	865
York	255	...
Totals	8,599	7,109

The Self-Governing League claims that its figures will be verified by the official returns, as its count was carefully planned and carried out.

Political Move.

It developed to-day that there was a deep-seated political line-up in the election which was not apparent yesterday. For some time it was indicated that the Democrats had lined up to aid in the repeal of the prohibition clause in the constitution. Word went out in the Republican ranks late yesterday to aid the Democrats. The Republicans by this move hoped to so embarrass the Democratic party that it can carry the State again for the Republican party in 1912 and return at least two Republicans to Congress to take seats now occupied by Democrats. The Republican machine workers claim that if the Democrats have to frame a liquor law the party in that State will be so split that it will be plain sailing for the Republicans in 1912.

Reports from Lewiston, Bath, Waterville, Augusta and Lewiston to-day show no change in the returns as given out last night.

Counties for Repeal.

Nine of the sixteen counties apparently have declared against prohibition. Cumberland, Kennebec, Androscoggin, York, Knox, Sagadahoc, Waldo, Hancock and Penobscot. There are a number of towns in Hancock County from which the returns have not been received, and without them Hancock has gone for repeal by 357.

Penobscot is not complete, but the great majorities for repeal contributed by Bangor and Oldtown and the majorities from large towns in the county are sufficient to overcome any "no" majorities in the towns unreported.

The counties which cast majorities for the retention of constitutional prohibition are: Oxford, Somerset, Piscataquis, Franklin, Lincoln, Aroostook and Washington.

In the country towns a much larger vote was cast than had been hoped for. The harvesting season is on and it was feared that many of the farmers would not take interest enough in the situation to go to the polls. This fear was found to be groundless, for in practically every village the vote was normal, and in a large number more than normal. This upset the calculations of the anti-prohibitionists and narrowed the result down.

MAINE STILL DRY UNTIL LEGISLATURE AND PEOPLE VOTE

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 12.—With the victory for repeal, Maine still retains on its statute book laws enacted as far back as the early fifties prohibiting the sale of all intoxicants save cider, excepting for medicinal and mechanical purposes.

Under these sixty-year-old statutory prohibition laws—from time to time amended until they form an intricate weaving of law in the cause of temperance—Maine is still a dry, prohibition State.

And the Prohibitionists still have as their most powerful weapon the initiative and the referendum, which is operative in this State.

Now that a majority of the citizens of the State have forced the rescinding of the amendment, the anti-prohibitionists, to push their victory, may follow either one of two courses.

They may induce Governor Plaisted to convene the Legislature—a Democratic and liquor majority Legislature—in special session, as that body has already adjourned, and railroad through such legislation as will repeal the existent prohibitory statutes and place among the laws of the State in place of the rescinded edicts one which will permit local option or high license.

It is then that the Prohibitionists, strengthened by the potent force of the initiative and referendum, will again give battle to the liquor interests.

Whatever law may be enacted at a special session, cannot become operative until three months after its passage.

During that time the prohibitionist party may obtain the names of 10,000 voters on a petition and ask that the matter be referred back to the people. The Legislature must then decide upon a day when the citizens shall vote on the resubmitted question.

Thus with the initiative and referendum, the issue is in the hands of the people, for should they give a majority in favor of the retention of the old prohibitory statutes the legislation passed is as naught. Should their vote sustain the Legislature, the enacted law will become effective.

The people may thus nullify any law that might be passed giving local option or high license and retain the original and existant prohibitory statutes.

The other course which may be followed by the repeal adherents is to prevent a special session of the Legislature and not tinker with the statute laws until a new Legislature is elected.

JAPAN TO QUIT PORT ARTHUR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Purely strategic reasons have induced the Japanese government to decide upon the abandonment of a naval station at Port Arthur, in Manchuria, representing an investment of many millions of dollars.

This station was built by the Russians when they were in control of the Laotung peninsula, under a nominal lease from China, and even after it was shown to fall of that degree of impregnability which was the expectation of its founders and fell into the hands of the Japanese as an incident to the Russo-Japanese war, the victors did not hesitate to spend another great sum of money upon the defences.

But the acquisition of Korea by the Japanese has made the Port Arthur station secondary in importance from a naval point of view. It was too near inland to be of any use in the defence of Korea, so the decision has been reached to abandon the place as a naval station and to transfer as much of the material as can be used elsewhere to the new site at Chinhai Bay, on the coast of Korea, a position that will command the entrance to the Yellow Sea and the great gulf of Pechili, as well as afford a measure of protection to the western coast of Japan and the straits of Korea.

Great docks will be constructed at this place, which will be reserved, exclusively, for naval purposes. The port will be closed to commerce, while Port Arthur will be released for the use of the merchant marine.

BALLOONIST IN FIELD OVERCOME

AUBURN, Me., Sept. 12.—In such an exhausted condition that he was not able to talk and had to be removed at once to the hospital, H. B. Shearman of Pittsfield, Mass., who made a balloon ascension from that city, was found on the farm of H. B. Estes to-day. Mr. Estes came upon Shearman, who was almost unconscious when he went out to investigate the presence of the huge balloon on his estate. Shearman could give his name but no more.

Sherman is president of the Williams College Aeronautical Society. He planned to reach Canada, and started out alone.

When the balloon passed over Webster Lake, N. H., the drag rope was dangling. The balloon appeared to be in no trouble then.

DROP CLIFFORD FROM NAVY LIST

Midshipmen Charles L. Clifford of No. 237 Willow street, West Roxbury, and Gaston L. Holmes of Mississippi, who were lost from the Naval Academy practise squadron at Bergen, Norway, recently, have been dropped from the navy list by Acting Secretary of the Navy Beekman Winthrop. The boys, upon landing at Bergen, strolled into the mountains, and according to their story became lost.

FRANCE'S REJECTION OF KAISER'S MOROCCAN REPLY RENEWS ALARM

Other countries outside of France and Germany are making such martial preparations as would indicate that they think war is possible.

There were persistent reports that France is hovering on the verge of taking a momentous step. There were other reports that the cabinet will discuss a supplemental series of proposals to go with the ultimatum which is to be presented to the German empire.

An electric thrill was in the air at the foreign office and there was a hint of something vast in contemplation. Foreign Minister De Selves and Premier Caillaux had a conference with President Fallieres to-day before the cabinet meeting.

France Remains Firm.

It is understood that France's reply, while it is written in a spirit of conciliation, is absolutely firm with regard to the position which France has assumed concerning questions of principle, from which France will not depart a hair's breadth.

The Premier's energetic and business-like manner of proceeding has had a good effect. It is regarded as another proof of the absolute unanimity and firmness of the government as to its policy and as a manifestation of the government's desire to do its utmost to shorten the period of uncertainty, which is having such prejudicial effect on the markets of the world. It also removes any possibility of charges that France, by delay, assisted in bringing about further financial distress in Germany.

The broad outlines of Germany's proposals have been communicated to the public, because the government believes that the people have a right to know at this period of tension what was being done.

Foreign Minister De Selves has also indicated in a semi-official note to the nation that France's reply would be a refusal to accept Germany's conditions. In this French opinion appears to be wholly united and prepared for any contingency.

One point of view in official quarters is that Germany's financial situation, which is expected to reach a climax by the end of September, may tend to moderate Germany's demands.

Ask for Free Hand.

The nature of Germany's reply to the proposal submitted by France with the idea of reaching an agreement regarding the Moroccan problem has affected French government circles unpleasantly. In addition to territorial demands, they require protection for German subjects to concessions in Morocco, which in many instances are enormous, shall be recognized by France, and that no new enterprise shall be started under the French protectorate without being internationalized equally.

The German terms also ask for a free hand in Morocco with conditions that would, according to the French view, deprive France of all her advantages, and would give Germany privileges in Morocco beyond those of any power, even France.

The delay, in the settlement of the Moroccan dispute sensibly affects the Bourse. To-day the market opened irregular and French 3 per cent rentes declined 25 centimes. Later nearly the whole list sold off, and the closing was weak.

The worst effect of the Moroccan uncertainties is upon business, which simply waits day by day to see what will happen. French houses have cancelled many buying orders in Germany, and the French banks, as previously indicated, refuse to renew the German loans falling due.

Credit likewise is cut off from Berlin in London. The Societe Generale, one of the most important of the French banks, has refused to renew a loan of 6,000,000 francs (approximately $1,200,000) made to the Deutsche Bank.

Kaiser Watches Troops.

The Emperor of Germany watched the manoeuvres of his army to-day, in which 110,000 men are participating, at Neu Brandenburg. Before he left Berlin yesterday he had a two hours' conference with Herr von Kinderlen-Waechter, foreign minister. Without doubt the Moroccan situation was discussed and the eventualities should France refuse Germany's demands.

Business conditions in Germany were reported to be somewhat better to-day. Herr von Kiderlin-Waechter's remark that anxiety regarding a conflict is absolutely groundless has evidently supplied the reassuring stimulus that was lacking.

The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger asserts that in governmental quarters a definite settlement of the Moroccan affair in broad outline may be expected, unless unexpected delays should develop, by the end of the week.

This newspaper, from its semi-official standing, possibly voices the authoritative view. It asserts, moreover, that Germany does not and cannot demand privileges of an exceptional kind in Morocco, but in the counter propositions she seeks safeguards against the monopolization of public works, mines and commercial possibilities and discrimination in the customs department.

Such guarantees, it adds, favor the interests of all nations. The cession of territory in compensation would necessitate a special agreement between France and Germany. All other provisos could be arranged as addenda to the Act of Algeciras.

In the meantime, the work of creating German interests in Morocco is being steadily pursued.

Anxiety in London.

In London official circles an anxious view of the Moroccan question is taken, and this view has not been changed by the receipt of the summary of the German reply to the French proposals. It is true, diplomats point out, that Germany appears to agree in principle to the establishment of a French protectorate in Morocco. She, however, makes such reservations as amount almost to a withdrawal from the agreement.

While no one professes to believe that war is probable there is no doubt of Great Britain's readiness therefor. Whether this has any connection with the negotiations cannot be said. Nevertheless the Admiralty has taken an unusual course. To-day it placed orders for 20,000 tons of coal at Cardiff without regard to the ordinary Admiralty list of collieries in order to obtain the best quality. This coal is being rushed to Scotland, off the coast of which the home fleet is now exercising, at heavy cost.

Lloyds insurance rates on war risks rose to-day to ten guineas per cent. for two months. Some underwriters are holding out for still higher rates. Goods or produce in steamers are not covered against capture or seizure unless an additional premium is paid.

VISION OF GIRL HAUNTS SLAYER

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 12.—Haunted by the vision of his victim and impelled to revisit the scene of his crime, the slayer of seventeen-year-old Myrtle Hawkins, stole back to the spot where he left the body, tumbled it into a buggy and drove to Lake Osceola, in which the corpse was found floating Sunday morning, the detectives believe.

The bushes at the head of the lake show where a buggy stopped and where a heavy object was draged to the water's edge. The condition of the body indicates that life was extinct for a long time before it reached the water. Lake Osceola is a Summer resort and the body would have been quickly discovered had it been in the water Saturday.

Many callers at the lake recall hearing a horse dashing along the road skirting the lake Saturday night, of hearing it stop at a point near where the body is supposed to have been thrown into the lake, and then galloping away.

Miss Hawkins was engaged to wed Hal Cooper of Johnson City, Tenn. When the girl disappeared her parents had a suspicion she had eloped with Cooper and did not at first seek the aid of the police.

CHARGE MAN WITH DAMAGING PROPERTY

Charged with maliciously damaging property on the Elm Farm estate in Roxbury, John J. McDonough of Norwood was arrested by Patrolman Gillis to-day. For several weeks the police have received complaints that harnesses were being cut, milk bottles broken and milk thrown away. Gillis was on Dudley street, near Mt. Pleasant avenue, when he saw three young men acting suspiciously. He gave chase and caught McDonough.

ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD BOY VETERAN SAFE ROBBER

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Max Mossbaum, eleven, a schoolboy, confessed to the police that he had been robbing safes for a year, and explained how he could open them by working the combination and listening to the falling tumblers. The lad was arrested while kneeling before a safe he had just opened in a wholesale millinery establishment. He admitted he had robbed the same safe a dozen times.

EIGHT WOMEN HURT IN BARGAIN RUSH

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—In a wild rush to get the advantage of bargains offered by a new dry goods store on Grand street, near Driggs avenue, in the eastern district of Brooklyn, to-day, two women were seriously injured and six others received cuts and bruises.

FORMER CHELSEA MAYOR IS DEAD

Former Mayor George E. Mitchell of Chelsea is dead at his late home, No. 9 Lawrence street, Chelsea, from heart disease. He served two terms as Mayor in 1887 and 1888. He has been on the Water Commission since 1901. He was in the Civil War.

URGE PEACE FOR THE GERAGHTYS

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 12.—"Julia, if I were you, I would simply walk into my mother's house and throw my arms around her neck. That would bring about the reconciliation you wish."

That is the advice give nto Mrs. "Jack" Geraghty, formerly Miss Julia Steel French, by a woman who is an intimate friend of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French.

Newport would not be surprised if Mrs. "Jack" follows this advice. There is a persistent report that a reconciliation will be effected any time, including acceptance of "Jack" by the French family.

Meanwhile "Jack" is working like a chap who realizes his new responsibilities. He is in partnership with E. H. Pender in a garage and auto supply business. Trade is good at the garage. The Newport chauffeurs, who admire "Jack," throw all the business his way that they can. And the chauffeurs can influence a lot of trade.

Personal property belonging to Mrs. Geraghty has been delivered to her at the cottage home, No. 37 Everett street. In addition there have come many packages of valuable gifts, including a set of diamond earrings, silverware, cut glass and pieces of Oriental carpenting. The names of these donors are withheld. Some go so far as to say that the members of the French family have sent them.

RECORD COAL OUTPUT FAILS TO CUT PRICE

All records for the production of anthracite in the United States have been broken, according to a dispatch to-day from Philadelphia. It is estimated that the production in the last four months of this year will be in excess of 23,000,000 tons, and that the year's total will approximate 69,000,000. The largest previous tonnage was 67,109,393 tons in 1907. Shipments of coal for eight months are the largest ever reported for the period and 3,632,593 in excess of shipments last year. This record production, however, will not affect the prices, according to large coal dealers in Boston. The retail price is $7.50 for stove and $8.75 for furnace coal. At the Metropolitan, the Staples and the Wellington-Wild coal companies it was stated that the outlook is for the continuance of the present rates notwithstanding the increased output.

CHARGED WITH THEFT OF AUTO DURING FIRE

Alleged to have jumped into one of the automobiles taken out during the fire in the Skinner garage Sunday morning, and to have driven off in it during the excitement, Frank H. Shea of Melrose street was arrested by Patrolman Miller. In the car were eight other young men, all of whom fled. Shea was arraigned before Chief Justice Bolster and held in $2,000 bonds for trial.

CHARGE AGAINST U. S. TRUSTS CONFIRMED BY PAPERS IN CANADA

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

MONTREAL, Sept. 12.—Confirmation of the AMERICAN'S charge that trusts of the United States are financing the anti-reciprocity campaign comes in one of the leading Conservative newspapers of Canada. The Ottawa Journal, which is a national Conservative organ opposed to reciprocity, but sane enough not to be carried away by the annexation argument, prints the following dispatch under the heading, "Money to Combat the Pact":

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—It is currently reported here and accepted as true that more than $1,000,000 has been subscribed by the big trusts for use in the Canadian elections the latter part of the month.

Big business is undeniably opposed to the ratification of the proposed reciprocity treaty and has lost its fight on the United States side. For the first time in its history it now seeks to influence the electorate of Canada.

The money for the conduct of the anti-reciprocity campaign, it is reported here, has been subscribed by no less than thirty different industries which will be hit hard if Sir Wilfred Laurier is vindicated at the polls.

Command of Fund.

Whiddon Graham, of Allen & Graham, who is handling the publicity end of the campaign for the trusts from Montreal, is in touch with New York respecting the developments and if necessary to accomplish the end sought it is believed he can command any additional funds that may be needed up to a reasonable amount.

Wall street fears there will be a big row over the use of the money in the election after it is over and is looking for a congressional commission of inquiry into its resources and employment. The results of such an investigation, those who are familiar with the present temper of the administration at Washington and the controlling element in the House of Representatives think, will have an important bearing on the shaping of the tariff measure to be enacted next Winter.

Incidental to this the AMERICAN correspondent is informed that the existing government here has already taken cognizance of the cumulative proof that trust money is coming across the border to influence the result of the election and a searching investigation is under way to locate the receiver general of the funds. Some sensational developments may be looked for in the closing days of the campaign.

The fact that the Ottawa Journal, which is conducting a vigorous anti-reciprocity campaign, prints this New York dispatch is evidence of the faith it has in the charge and of the indignation felt by honest Conservatives over such campaign methods.

This is the real interference in Canadian politics by the United States and the sinister influence that is most dreaded by the Canadian people.

To Push Fight Hard.

That the charge of trust influence is credited by a leading anti-reciprocity newspaper merely accentuates the situation which is rapidly reaching a crisis here. From now on the fight will be pushed hard in Quebec Province, where Sir Wilfrid will spend most of the week addressing rallies.

There is a confident feeling that the Liberals have the Conservatives on the run and the latter will not be given a chance for a breathing spell between now and the 21st, the day of the voting.

From now on, too, the fighting must be on the square basis of the merits of reciprocity, pure and simple. The annexation bugaboo was practically disposed of at Saturday's night's fiasco when a group of obscure politicians who attempted, by assembling a meeting to denounce William Randolph Hearst, to make annexation the supreme issue, vindicated the attitude of Mr. Hearst and eliminated annexation from serious consideration.

Even the Conservatives are now sailing clear of annexation, so absurd is it as a convincing argument and so insulting to the great body of loyal Canadians.

No Affect on Loyalty.

Over in Ontario, where, next to Quebec, victory for Sir Wilfrid is so vital, Sir James Whitney, Premier of the province and an ardent opponent of reciprocity, has issued this statement to his people in a speech opposing the pact:

"The people of Canada as a unit or as individuals, will not be affected in the slightest degree in their loyalty and allegiance to Britain or British institutions by reciprocity, or any other agreement of its character. The people of Canada are determined to retain their proud position in Information reached here which indicates that the United States will enjoy the benefits of reciprocity with Newfoundland, and vice versa, in a short time after the pact has been ratified at Ottawa. Newfoundland has never entered the Canadian Federation, but remains an independent federation.

There has been talk of direct negotiations with the United States to effect a reciprocity treaty agreement similar to that which is at issue here; but information is now received from St. Johns that as soon as Canada ratifies reciprocity a movement will be launched in Newfoundland for union with the Dominion.

Wants Trade Deal.

Newfoundland has several times without success sought better trade terms with the United States. This bargain made by Canada, which will give free entry of fish to the United States, has aroused great interest in Newfoundland and a desire to share with Canada in the advantages of the greater American market.

It is felt by the party now forming in Newfoundland that this can be easier done through union with Canada than by direct negotiations with the United States. The ratification of reciprocity by Canada, it is understood on good authority, is likely to be shortly followed by the arrival of commissioners from Newfoundland to discuss terms of union.

The Montreal Herald prints the following account of the Champ de Mars demonstration of Saturday night:

"The meeting on the Champ de Mars to protest against the alleged interference of William Randolph Hearst and his newspapers in the present election campaign in Canada developed into something of a fiasco on Saturday night.

Lots of Advertising.

"The meeting had been sensationally advertised by playbills and elaborately boomed by the Star, with hysterical attempts to arouse anti-American sentiment. The effect which that kind of campaign is having may be judged by the size and temper of the meeting.

"Not more than 1,500 people went near the place, and the majority of these seemed to be animated more by a spirit of ridicule than interest. They listened to the anti-Hearst diatribes while there was nothing else more interesting going, but when Mr. St. Martin, Socialist, obtained a table from somewhere and started to harangue the crowd from a point to the left of the main platform there was an immediate rush to the new object of interest, and the main crowd was decreased by several hundred. They did not appear to be as greatly disturbed as the speakers about the circulation of the Hearst papers in Canada.

"Another element of distraction was a considerable body of Laval students who grouped themselves on the steps near the courthouse and filled the night air with cries of 'Vive, Laurier! L-a-u-r-i-e-r—Laurier!' They sang so lustily that it was with the greatest difficulty that the anti-Hearst speakers made themselves heard.

"Then the students organized a burlesque counter demonstration on the Craig street side of the field and several budding orators delivered impassioned addresses to their wildly cheering fellows. This attracted more hundreds from the main crowd."

CRUISERS SAIL TO AID OF MISSIONARIES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—All the American naval strength deemed necessary as a precaution is being concentrated as near as possible to the scene of serious disorders in China. Admiral Murdock cabled to the Navy Department that he sailed on his flagship Saratoga, accompanied by the cruisers New Orleans and Helena, from Shanghai for Nanking. At that point they will relieve the light draft gunboat which will push on up the river to get as near as possible to Szechuen province and afford asylum to the missionaries who have been obliged to leave Chengtu.

TWO SUBWAY TICKETS COST THIEF $500

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—"I am a disgrace to myself, my country and my friends," said William B. Ford, a lawyer and former soldier, when arraigned before a magistrate for sentence on his plea of guilty to a charge of larceny of two five-cent subway tickets. "But I am not responsible. I am the victim of some force I cannot resist. I used to be a decent man." He was fined $500 and sentenced to one year.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Sixty or more men, women and children are reported recovering from ptomaine poisoning after eating cold-storage chickens at a wedding feast.

Miss Mellyn, Hub's Busiest Woman

Miss Mellyn has charge of the substitute teachers in Boston's public schools so that she has to teach the teachers who want to teach the young idea how to shoot. If you think Miss Mellyn isn't the very busiest young woman in Boston just now, ask her.

By GERTRUDE L. MARVIN.

When the Boston public schools open to-morrow morning the Boston School Committee will face an avalanche of 101,000 children who must have seats and books and teachers and lessons all in a minute. So there can't be any doubt that the committee rooms on Mason street are the busiest part of Boston all this week. And the busiest woman is Miss Mary C. Mellyn, who has charge of all the substitute teachers. The hall outside her office door is thronged with eager laughing girls all day long—young Normal school graduates who have not obtained regular positions yet and are hoping for substitute work. One by one they file into Miss Mellyn's office, have a little talk, and come out with beaming faces, full of enthusiasm for the coming year.

"I love the work with the girls," said Miss Mellyn in a five minutes' respite from seeing candidates. "I find them enthusiastic, responsive, eager to get work, and to do their best when they get it, and always ready to accept advice and help.

"The great majority are Boston girls and graduates of our Normal School. The school has a difficult course, and I think that almost any girl who graduates there has proven herself fitted to become a teacher. Occasionally I meet a girl whom I advise not to try to go on with the work, but this is very rare.

The Way to Success.

"It is hard to say just what qualities interfere with a girl making a good teacher. I think it may be best summed up by calling it a lack of personal force, a negative rather than a positive character. As for the qualities which are necessary for a good teacher, I simply cannot try to give them, because it is so largely an individual matter. We try to make the work of this office with the girls entirely individual. It is not what she might do if she had some other position, but what she is doing with the conditions that she has. If I find conditions too difficult for a girl, I sometimes transfer her from a place that needs more experience and greater force to another place where she shall have a better chance to do herself justice.

"Granted the girl has ability to teach—and almost all of these girls have—I simply will not permit her to fail. She can succeed somewhere, and I feel that it is the work of this office to recognize her place and put her in it. Some girls are best adapted to teaching boys, others have talent for handling little children, and some soon show that they are fitted to teach anywhere, that they have the strong teaching genius.

Encouragement a Factor.

"I think the thing we most want to do here is to keep the girls in that atmosphere of encouragement, which is essential to success. This is difficult because there are so many girls and so few opportunities. I want to make every girl feel that she has it in herself to do good work. I find it a great help that I meet these girls not as a stranger, but as a teacher, for I have a class in the Normal School during the year, so that I have met these girls every week all the year before they graduate. Then they come here in the Fall, it is just coming back to their teacher who has given them advice before and is eager to help them again.

"I especially try to cultivate a feeling of esprit de corps among the girls, to make them realize that even before they are regularly engaged on the teaching staff, they are a part of the school system and have that big organization behind them.

"The girls are divided into three classes, those who have graduated this year from the Normal School, those who have graduated prior to 1911, and teachers from outside of Boston who have passed our examinations.

Call for Substitutes.

"During the year we have approximately two thousand calls from the schools for substitute teachers. We fill all temporary positions, from the high schools to the kindergartens, but we fill only temporary positions, and they vary in length of time from a year to a day. During the Summer I receive applications for the long term places. These are the places of teachers who are away for their sabbatical year, or on a three months' sick leave or something of the sort. I fill these places from the prior list—the girls who have graduated prior to this year, because these girls have been in the work before and are experienced. I have had an opportunity to test them, and know just what they can do.

"I feel that this taking of the experienced girls for the longer positions is to the advantage of the girls themselves and of the children too. The girls who graduated in June are taken for the short term work, perhaps a day or a few weeks. I come in here and begin seeing the girls a week before school opens, so that they can get their assignments and be ready to begin work at once. Every school day during the year this office is open at 8:15, and the principals call up on the telephone when they need a substitute, telling what grade it is for.

"I immediately send out a girl, and I try to fit in the girl best adapted to that particular class from the group of girls whom I have waiting that morning. The calls come in until about 9:30. Every girl on the list gets her opportunity.

"I try to arrange that each girl shall have the same amount of substitute work, but that is difficult. At 9:30 my assistant and I go out and spend the day visiting and watching and guiding the girls whom we have sent out. We make two sorts of visits. Our first calls are to look over the situation, to help the girl, and if the conditions are too difficult for her, to change them. We do not mark on these calls. But after that we make a series of visits where we judge what we see of the girls' work, and on these visits we base the girls' marks.

"All the substitutes' work is marked by the school principals and by the visiting supervisors. These marks are passed over to the Board of Superintendents at the end of the school year and form an essential element in the make up of the new merit list. Wednesdays and Fridays we have conferences here of all the unemployed substitutes. We have lessons on class arrangement, on program making and all the mechanics of school room work. I try to tell them the things which an experienced teacher has found out and can pass on to the inexperienced."

CLARK DEFENDS THE POLITICIANS

LOUISIANA, Mo., Sept. 12.—Speaker Champ Clark of the House of Representatives is being entertained by the home folks, the greater part of the population of the Ninth Missouri Congressional District joining to make his homecoming from Washington an epoch in Missouri history.

It was here that Mr. Clark landed from a steamboat thirty-six years ago, as a young attorney from Kentucky, and throughout all these years he has accumulated an acquaintance which is legion and loyal.

Next to Mr. Clark's address is the basket dinner, with home-fried chicken and home-grown watermelons on ice.

Among the speakers were Representatives I. S. Pepper, Iowa, and Henry T. Rainey, Illinois.

Speaker Clark told of starting his Missouri experience by teaching school thirty-six years ago, and said:

Tells of Early Hardships.

"I came to Louisiana, Mo., on $10, borrowed the first time I ever saw him from Judge H. H. Priest, now an eminent lawyer of St. Louis, and then struggling along as city attorney of Moberly. And that is not the last time I have borrowed from Missourians."

The Speaker made a plea for more politics and more politicians, and asserted that honest politicians are the rule, and not the exception, in America.

"Instead of there being too many politicians, there are not enough. In a country whose institutions are based upon popular suffrage, every man should be politician, and every man owns a portion of his time, energy and talents to the service of his State. I do not mean by that that every man should run for office. That is a poor business at best—poor when you succeed, inexpressibly poor when you fail. I have been tried by both extremes of fortune, and speak by the card on that subject.

"It is the duty of every citizen to attend both the primaries and the general election, to the end that good and capable men may be selected. No victory for purity in politics has ever yet been won by failing to attend the elections and then growling and kicking about the character of the men selected.

Right Will Triumph.

"The probabilities are that there is not a congressional district in America where there is a majority of purchasable voters, and that the unpurchasable voters can control every one of them if they would only do their duty.

"No doubt there are corrupt men in politics; so are there corrupt men in every business and profession, but it is a consolation to reflect that there are not so many corrupt ones either in politics or in any other walk of life this year as there were last year, and there will not be so many corrupt ones next year as there are this year. Corrupt men ought to be scourged out of public life with a whip of scorpions, and they are being weeded out."

In conclusion, Speaker Clark pleaded for more enlightenment on the real political facts, and said:

"The persistent charge that all public men are for sale and that all government in this country is thoroughly rotten, not only puts improper ideas into the heads of our own people and of our own children, but has a woeful effect on the immigrants coming to our shores at the rate of more than a million per annum to be assimilated by us and to be formed and fashioned into American citizens. They come hither because of the opportunity to improve their condition and to enjoy the blessings of our free institutions. They look to America as a sort of heaven on earth. They have been taught at home to regard this as the best government on earth—which it is.

Example to Immigrants.

"What must be their astonishment and regret to hear and to read as soon as they land on our shore that all public men are corrupt; that the voters are venal and the government rotten to the core! As certain as a gun is made of iron, that must have a bad and demoralizing effect upon them. It is a bad and a sad lesson in preparing themselves for the onerous and important duties of American citizenship.

"They should be taught that our theory of government is the best ever devised by the wit of man; that the vast majority of American voters of all parties are absolutely honest; that the majority of public men are of high character and patriotic; that the corruptionists are only the exceptions, which prove the rule.

"I have gone into this subject somewhat in extreme not to cover any man's sins, nor to offer a plea in mitigation for sinners, but because it has appeared to me that there are so many pessimists in the land, and that the indiscriminate defamation of public men must have inevitably such a deleterious effect upon the boys and girls who must soon take our place, that somebody who can get a hearing should contradict the palpable and mischievous slander that all public men are corrupt.

"I do not believe for one moment that the country is going to what Mr. Mantalini was wont to denominate as 'the demnition bow-wows.' I am an optimist, not a pessimist. It is better to look upon the bright side of things than the dark. A jubilate is more pleasant music than a miserere. It surely must be that 93,000,000 Americans, habituated to free institutions, will not permit those institutions to perish from the earth.

"It is a great and glorious privilege to be a Missourian, but the greatest and most glorious privilege vouchsafed to us is to be Americans, with all the proud recollections, fond hopes, and high aspirations of Americans."

RESENT CRANE'S COLLEGE ATTACK

Revelations made in an investigation of student conditions at Harvard and the other big universities of the country, made by R. T. Crane, millionaire manufacturer of Chicago, and printed exclusively in last Sunday's AMERICAN, continue to hold the attention of college authorities everywhere. President Hadley of Yale read the charges but declined to make any comment. Mr. Crane declared Yale nearly as bad as Harvard.

Dean Frederick Jones of Yale said:

"I don't know of any clubs having their tables at barrooms. As in the case with all articles of this kind, the statements are exaggerated—grossly exaggerated. If Mr. Crane intends that the table given for Harvard is to apply at Yale, he is wrong. The social organization at Yale frowns on such things. No man can drink and carouse here at Yale without incurring the displeasure not only of the faculty but of the leaders in the undergraduate world—his own fellows. The society system keeps such things down and corrects them, and such actions as are mentioned in the article are frowned upon by the men in college.

High Social Plane.

"It is rarely—very rarely—that a man has to be disciplined at Yale for the offences mentioned in the article; in fact, it is difficult to remember such a case. Here at Yale the college sentiment is against such things and the undergraduates know it.

"The social atmosphere at Yale is improving steadily and the graduates and undergraduates realize it. To-day it is of a high plane. Needless to say, the statements in the article in respect to Yale, at least, are greatly exaggerated."

At Sea Girt, N. J., Governor Wilson was asked if he had any statement to make in reply to Mr. Crane's charge that 200 Princeton men had been dead drunk. The Governor at first refused to make any comment. He said he was sure there was no truth in the charge. He said that from his observations while at the head of the university he felt satisfied that the entire moral tone of the college had been uplifted, and that in this opinion the faculty all concurred.

"The vast majority of Princeton students are a studious, hard-working lot of young men, who become successful in their careers after leaving college, and if such a condition existed as is said to have been described by Mr. Crane, who I am sure was much mistaken, neither myself nor the other members of the faculty ever saw any evidence of it."

Colonel James B. Curtis of New York, president of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity, was asked for his idea concerning the charges made by Mr. Crane. He said:

Requires Careful Analysis

"It is easy for even a fair-minded man to become alarmed as a result of a casual look into a few phases of American college student life. This would result in fierce charges, for some of which there is foundation. These charges result in just as fierce denials by college authorities, so that little is gained by the war of charge and counter-charge. No one is fitted to reach a conclusion as to the student life in American colleges without tedious examination and careful analysis of the situation in each particular institution.

"It is folly to charge that the authorities of our American colleges encourage immoral and lazy lives among the students there. It is likewise a mistake to condemn without mercy one who makes a charge based upon what he may have seen in some particular instance.

"The fact is that our American colleges and universities have grown in wealth and in the number of students that they can no longer be compared with the small colleges of a generation ago, or even twenty years ago. It is utterly impossible for the great American college longer to throw around the freshmen and students generally the safeguards and influences of home life which were given a generation ago.

"Several years ago, in my study of the problem, I discovered that there was apparently a decadence in the scholarship and morals of our students. The problem was one which deserved serious consideration in the way of solving it, rather than publicity in the way of condemnation, before an effort at solution had been tested.

WILLIE GOAT HAS BAND'S NANNY

William Terror Goat, unofficial mascot of the battleship Rhode Island, has the nanny of the marine band at the Navy Yard.

The bandsmen do not always play with Billy. Neither do they always walk with Billy, nor dine with Billy, but they always run from Billy when that pet of the sailors on the Rhode Island starts after them with lowered head and a butting-in disposition.

Being a sailor, William Terror hates the marines. All sailors do traditionally, but William does on general principles. He never loses an opportunity to let the marines know it.

William T. got in bad at the Navy Yard when he tired of rations and began browsing on the floral delicacies in the flower beds in front of the houses in Officers' Row. He was driven off by the marine sentry and then placed under arrest.

That got William's goat. Arrested by marines. He was so overcome by the disgrace that he went along quietly until he caught sight of the Marine Band coming from a concert on the Wabash.

"For the love of Mike!" exclaimed William in goat language. "Isn't there anybody but marines about this Navy Yard?"

And with that William T. broke his guard and made for the bandsmen. Something told the latter that William was in serious mood. They scattered and ran. William almost butted several of them and then satisfied he submitted again to arrest.

He was led back to the Rhode Island and given a cordial welcome by the sailors.

She had previously pleaded guilty to the larceny of two pendants from the firm of Shreve, Crump & Low Company. The pendants were valued at $675.

NOT SALTS, OIL OR PILLS BUT CASCARETS

No Odds How Sick Your Stomach; How Hard Your Head Aches or How Bilious — Cascarets Make You Feel Great.

You men and women who somehow can't get feeling right—who have an almost daily headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn out.

Are you keeping clean inside with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the decomposed waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—do good—never gripe or sicken.

BRIDE AWAITING NEWS OF REAM

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Mrs. Louis Marshall Ream, who is known to Broadway as Eleanor Pendleton of the chorus in "The Belle of Mayfair," is waiting in her apartment at No. 206 West Fifty-second street for her husband of twelve days to return from Thompson, Ct., where he has been trying to persuade his father, a $60,000,000 associate of J. Pierpont Morgan, that he is glad to have a stage favorite for a daughter-in-law.

One lone message from the theatre of war in Connecticut has broken the monotony of the last five days, and that was nothing more than a bare assurance that her husband had been forgiven, with a supplementary recommendation that a little more patience was necessary and all would be well.

An interview to-day with young Mrs. Ream served only to elicit the information that she had heard nothing from her husband since that last telephone message.

"Certainly he is not here," said the bride petulantly, "and I don't know when he will be here and I haven't heard from him either and—that's all I have to say."

Both Louis Ream and his father are still in Thompson. A third person is with them, Lawyer William Miller, of the firm of Hornblower, Miller & Potter, who are Mr. Ream's legal representatives. He has not returned since he was summoned to a conference at the end of last week.

At the New York Trust Company, where young Ream was assistant cashier, it was said that the vacation granted him on the first of September, under cover of which he made a flying motor trip to Hoboken and took unto himself a wife, was over yesterday, and the officials have looked for his return to his position.

Norman B. Ream, father of the young newlywed and the supreme court of appeal, still smiles sardonically whenever approached and protests that nothing is further from his thoughts than to hold the "poor boy."

What will ensue, Mr. Ream, with the wisdom of a good stage manager, declines to say at this juncture. But if the young couple are adventurous enough to sail against the current of parental wishes, "love in a cottage" will probably supplant the bride's roseate visions.

AWAIT DEMOCRATS' REPLIES TO WHITE

Candidates for Democratic nominations for State offices are expected to reply to the speech of Norman H. White in Springfield in which he declared the credit for labor legislation belongs to the Republicans. Mr. White said that the claims of the Democrats that they put through the direct primaries bill, the workmen's compensation act and the act limiting the labor of women and children in industrial establishments are without foundation, as, he said, the Republicans were responsible for the passing of them. He also declared that credit for the passage of the Boston harbor bill belongs to the Republicans. He said Governor Foss would have vetoed the industrial labor bill "had not the labor leaders held a club over his head and compelled him to sign it."

GIRL SURE SUSPECT IS HER ASSAILANT

Seven-year-old Marguerite Scranton of Salem to-day said she felt sure that Sumner Libbey, arrested by the Lynn police, was the man who attacked her. Her brother Steward also thought the prisoner was the man, but the girl's father, who had an encounter with the assailant, was unable to positively identify him. Sumner will be turned over to the Salem police.

RACE DEATH TO SAVE BRAKEMAN

An express train and an ambulance were pressed into service in a race with death early to-day, when John J. Carson, thirty-nine, a brakeman on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad, was run over and probably fatally injured by a freight train at the Back Bay station.

Carson was walking along the top of the cars as the freight neared the bridge at the Back Bay station. He did not notice the bridge, was knocked between two cars and both legs were cut off below the knees.

Tearing their overalls and jumpers into strips, the other train hands bound tourniquets about Carson's thighs. An inbound train was stopped and the injured man was hurried to the South Station.

An ambulance was waiting when the train arrived and Carson was driven with all possible speed to the Massachusetts General Hospital. He nearly bled to death on the way. Despite the excruciating pain he retained consciousness. Carson is married and lived at Scituate.

MAYOR ATTACKS BACK BAY FOLKS

A statement issued by Mayor Fitzgerald as a result of the defeat of the Arlington street extension order by the City Council was the main topic of comment in the City Hall to-day. The Mayor's statement follows:

I regret that the Arlington street extension order was defeated. I was somewhat astonished to-day to learn that Robert Homans and Roger F. Sturgis were in City Hall lobbying against this measure on the ground that the cold wind would blow through Arlington street and kill the trees in the Public Garden in a few years. This incident is another link in the chain of evidence setting forth the fact that the people who own property in and about Beacon street adjacent to the Basin, propose to reserve the reservation for their own uses just as long as the people will submit.

I had begun to have faith that there was real sincerity in the movement, which seemed to be general, to get together for Boston's future upbuilding, but this incident makes me doubt. However, I am not discouraged.

GRANDMOTHER OF 3 WHEN 30 YEARS OLD

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 12.—A grandmother of two children at the age of twenty-nine and three at thirty is the record of Mrs. E. W. Bender of this city. It is claimed Mrs. Bender is the youngest grandmother in the world. Mrs. Bender who is thirty-one years old, was born in 1880 in South Carolina. She was married to E. W. Moore at Columbia, S. C. Mr. Moore died later and his widow married Bender. In 1892 she was only thirteen years old when her first child was born.

SEEKS INJUNCTION TO PREVENT BLASTING

Claiming that the blasting of a ledge and a number of rocks on the ocean side of her property will mar the beauty of the estate, Mrs. Mary H. JESSE FEWKES DEAD AT HIS NEWTON HOME

WOMAN FLAYS CUSTOMS MEN

Customs Inspectors at Boston "insulted, embarrassed and all but hazed" Mrs. James Brown of Denver when she returned from abroad, according to a statement she has just made at the Newport, R. I., hotel where she is staying.

Mrs. Brown arrived in Boston August 11, bringing with her a pearl necklace which she had purchased abroad. The inspectors appraised it, she paid the duty and was on her way to Newport when she was held up by the inspectors, who accompanied her to Newport, took her necklace and later returned it, apologizing for their trouble.

"When I arrived in Boston I had copied on my declaration all the goods purchased abroad; with this I pinned receipted bills and had the goods in such a position as to make them easily accessible, but was astonished when told that the charges would be over twice as much as I had believed," she said. "Imagine my surprise when I was stopped by two uniformed inspectors who demanded my pearl necklace. It was in a trunk which had previously been shipped, and I had to ride with them in a day coach to Newport.

"When I arrived here they took my necklace. The following day it was returned to me by mail with a letter of apology. Hazing is obsolete in this country, but it is the only method not yet adopted by Boston Custom House officials. Action should be taken to give a returning tourist with proper credentials some right to land in this country, especially in Boston."

DYING IN DUEL FOR GIRL'S HAND

When Salvatore Marsala of West Natick was arraigned in the Quincy Court to-day charged with inflicting wounds that may cause the death of Fortunapo Celano of No. 30 North Union street, Arlington, the police told of a desperate duel over the affections of a twenty-three-year-old belle of the Italian colony in Arlington that might have had the counterpart in the hills of Italy scores of years ago.

Celano, Joseph L. Beleastio and his daughter came to Natick to visit the Italian camp. Celano and the girl were engaged to be married. The party were at the camp only a few minutes before Marsala who also was badly smitten, and Celano became involved in a wordy warfare.

The givals went to the junction of Worcester and Hartford streets and with the parent of the girl as a witness, began to fight savagely. Beleastion tried to quell the quarrel but the men fought the harder, and finally, it is alleged, Marsalla drew a stiletto and inflicted two deep wounds in Celano's chest.

While they were in the midst of the fight Vi Lauro, who happened along in a wagon, attempted to stop the fight by lashing the infuriated participants, but without avail. Then he picked up a club, but the struggling men refused to stop, and it was not until Celano fell mortally wounded, that the duel ended. Marsala was caught by the police half an hour later.

WOMAN SHUTS FIREMEN OUT

Momentarily driven out of her head by the smoke and flames, Mrs. Mary McDermott slammed the front door of her apartments in the faces of the firemen while eleven other persons, including four children, fled to the street during a fire which caused a loss of $500 in the four-story wooden tenement house, at the rear of No. 23 Devens street, Charlestown, early to-day. All the time the fire was in progress Mrs. McDermott shouted at the firemen and the neighbors.

"You couldn't get me out of here any other way," she cried shaking her fist at a group of women gathered near the door, "and you tried this way. This fire was set and it was my enemies who did it."

Mrs. McDermott lived on the first floor. The fire started in the basement and when it was discovered was burning its way into her apartments.

Mrs. Holbrook and Mrs. Barker, who also occupied rooms on the first floor, were awakened by the shouts of neighbors and fled. The house rapidly filled with smoke and Mr. and Mrs. Dennis McCarthy and their three children on the top floor were nearly overcome. They groped their way down stairs in safety.

Mrs. Mary Parker occupied part of the second floor with her son Philip and daughter Anna. Anna seized her five-year-old nephew, John Parker, and carried him out, followed by her mother and brother. The top floor of the dwelling was unoccupied.

LAD SHOT WHILE PLAYING COWBOY.

WINTHROP, Sept. 12.—Douglas Husted, fifteen, of No. 18 Temple avenue, is dying at the Metcalf Hospital as the result of having been shot by Earl Johnson, seventeen, of No. 36 Temple avenue, while the boys were playing they were cowboys. At the hospital Husted told the police that the shooting was entirely accidental, so Johnson has not been arrested.

Johnson told the police that both he and Husted had revolvers and were playing wild west in a barn. He said they were doing tricks with the pistols and that while he was twirling his revolver upon one finger the hammer came down and discharged the weapon. He said that neither he nor his companion realized that the revolvers were loaded.

After the shooting young Husted fell to the floor of the barn, but he managed to get upon his feet and Johnson aided him to his home, a short distance away. The boy was then taken to the hospital, where Dr. H. H. Metcalf said there was little hope of saving his life.

Talk With Men Who Know

Wherever you find men who have ownea several motor cars, men who are hard to please, who insist that their car must possess dignity, power and comfort, who demand ceaseless, unfailing service—these men will say, "Buy a Lozier."

The Lozier car has won its position of admitted supremacy because it has always had right engineering ideas behind it. It has embodied, from the first, those principles of design, those details of finish, those qualities of power, speed and safety which appeal to discriminating buyers.

Radical changes in design have never been made; for the Lozier designers looked far ahead. They anticipated—as far back as 1896—many features now being adopted generally.

The Lozier was the first American stock car equipped with fore-doors and the now universally used Bosch magneto. From the beginning Lozier cars were built with 36-inch wheels, long wheel base, double ignition, ball bearings and nickel steel axles—features now standard on nearly all cars.

Lozier was among the first to build six-cylinder cars, to employ the multiple disc clutch, four-speed selective transmission, ball bearing crank shaft and other desirable features not yet found or only now being introduced on other high-class cars.

Time and again Lozier principles, which others at first questioned, have later become the accepted practice.

As a result, Lozier is today the car to satisfy the man who knows—the man who has driven many cars. Such men are quick to recognize that in this car you get as near perfection as the present art of motor building permits.

You get safety; we guarantee you can't break a Lozier under any driving conditions a human being can stand, anywhere on any kind of road.

You get absolute dependability; of all the Lozier owners taking their cars to Europe last year, none had to open the box of repair parts.

You get speed; our victories and successful finishes in all the big events of recent years prove Lozier speed and consistency. At Indianapolis, May 30, Mulford, in a Lozier, drove the fastest 500 miles ever driven by one man.

You get comfort, elegance, quality—that quality which has always gone into every product of the house of Lozier.

To sum it all up—in owning a Lozier car you get the satisfaction of knowing that no one whom you meet at the club, the seashore, in the mountains, on the boulevard, or on the road has a car as high class as your own—no one except the other Lozier owners.

We invite you to call or phone us and let us show you the 1912 Lozier cars.

ARCHBISHOP O'CONNELL HOME: PREDICTS A BIG CRISIS ACROSS SEAS

Predicting that Europe will shortly be involved in the greatest political and religious crisis in her history, Archbishop William H. O'Connell of the Archdiocese of Boston, is back from a tour of England and the Continent.

Since the distinguished prelate has been in Europe, he has made a close study of political and religious conditions, especially in France and Germany. His observations and predictions are especially interesting at this time.

The archbishop arrived in New York on the liner Kroonland. He looks the picture of health and has benefited physically by his vacation. He will remain in New York a few days before returning to Boston and will be in this city by Monday when he will join in the archdiocesan retreat at St. John's Seminary.

The Rev. Dr. P. J. Supple and the Rev. James P. E. O'Connell, greeted the archbishop at the docks. With the head of the archdiocese arrived Monsignor Michael Splain, Chancellor and Pio De Lucca, his traveling companions through Europe. In an interview, the Archbishop said:

Went Away for Rest.

"I went away for a rest and got it. That was the only purpose of my sojourn abroad and that was accomplished. In Europe they had the hottest Summer in years, as in America. It came later during the months of July and August. While I went away for a rest that doesn't mean I was inactive.

"I took the opportunity of looking into conditions, social and moral, in the countries of Europe, Belgium, Holland, France, Germany and shall have occasion to speak about them later on.

"No one who knows conditions in Europe doubts that they are facing a great political and religious crisis in all these countries and that all concerned in the welfare of the social organization generally are preparing for the fray.

France's Blunder.

"Belgium and Germany are specially well organized religiously and France is growing in strength in that direction every day. The fundamental principles of society are being attacked by various radical associations, and now more than ever it is clear that the war is to be between faith and infidelity.

"All through Germany I saw the most wonderful manifestation of Catholic organization. The Emperor himself sees in them the main support of order and law.

"The general feeling throughout France now is that unless they wish to see their country hopelessly enfeebled they must retrace their steps. Even the radicals now see that the rabid policy they have been pursuing the past few years is a fearful national blunder and that in the face of a crisis before which they now stand they need that solidarity which came only from internal harmony and peace.

"The few leaders who, to content the most irresponsible element of the French nation, have waged a relentless prosecution against the best sons and daughters of France, are opening their eyes at last to the results which are anything but consoling to true patriotic Frenchmen. There is no doubt that France will soon again take her honored place as a great Christian nation.

"O, but this is going deep into a question that would require a volume, but I have had a good opportunity to study and hope have profited by it. I am happy to be in our own dear country, where such strife begets small sympathy.

"Europe is filled with strikes and rumors of strikes. Of course there are always two sides to questions like these, and until each side can look with some sort of patience at the other point of view and recognize that at best they are a fearful calamity to any nation they are unfortunately likely to be repeated.

Disturbances n England.

"What struck me above all was that England, which hitherto has been fairly free of internal struggles, has been the chief centre of the late disturbances.

"I expected to meet Mayor Fitzgerald and the Boston Chamber of Commerce delegation in Geneva, but on account of the heat they changed their itinerary and so I missed them. I should have been glad to meet them during their European trip, but their flight was like that of a comet—from city to city.

"I am sure they gathered much useful information by their tour. For instance, it must have struck them that a city like Antwerp or a little river like the Scheldt, a day's ride from the sea, still had created for itself the port facilities of a great commercial capital.

"It is in fact one of the principal ports of all Europe, whereas our Boston with its wonderful sea front still seems to be unable to create for itself the position in commerce which nature evidently intended her to occupy.

"That's one of the many things which struck me quite casually and of course must have come home with double force to a body of men like the Chamber of Commerce.

Met Americans Abroad.

"If I were to go into the subject of roads and parks, the comparison between those in Europe and our efforts, especially considering the enormous wealth of America, would be rather humiliating for us.

"I met a number of American gentlemen who were touring Europe in their cars and there was only the most absolute unanimity by experience. Everywhere they went the roads are perfect. One can ride from Hamburg all over Germany, even down to Italy and especially all over France, and scarcely find a rut in the road.

"There is no question that we have much yet to learn from Europe, even from us. Here let me add that the prestige of America all over the continent of Europe has grown to the most gratifying proportions.

"I remember 20 years ago—and that certainly is not a long span—when everything American was looked upon with an eye of suspicion. To-day in the European market the best of everything is labeled 'American taste' or 'American fashion.' Considering the sensitiveness and the amour propre of European nations generally, this is certainly a tremendous admission.

"The pleasure of my homecoming is very much diminished by learning of the death of Dr. Thomas Dwight. He was a type of Christian manhood and perfect devotion to principle at any cost which Boston, and for that matter the nation, can ill afford to lose.

"Knowing before I left America the waning condition of his health, the day before I left Boston I went down to Nahant to pay him a visit which I suspected even then might be a farewell and final adieu.

"His example of Christian fortitude as a soldier of truth is worthy of the Warren blood that ran in his veins. No Catholic of the diocese of Boston but mourns his loss and no true gentleman, whatever his faith, but will regret the death of this genuine Bostonian of the best type."

FOUR ELOPE IN A DAY AT WARE

WARE, Sept. 12.—Two elopements having occurred at once this town is crackling with gossip. Harrison W. Langdon, the twenty-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Langdon of South street, has married Helen E. Leahan, eighteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James F. Leahan of Spring street.

Without the knowledge of their parents the young people slipped away to Hartford, Ct. The day they went was the same that Miss Leahan's parents were to send her to the New England Conservatory of Music. The couple were grammar and high school mates.

Langdon was prominent in track athletics. He is a Protestant. His bride is a Catholic. The parents now say they will forgive the couple.

The second elopement is that of Kereaco Vaselopopolos, a fruit dealer of forty-two years, and Miss Georgianna Ludopoulos, who is only nineteen. They have been acquainted only ten days, the girl's family having lived here two weeks. The couple went to Chicopee Falls, were married and continued to New York. The bride's parents are quoted as saying that there is too much difference between the ages of the couple.

KENOSHA, Wis., Sept. 12.—Nathan Allen, indicted in New York for smuggling into the country the jewels of Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins, is back in Kenosha, dodging everyone who knew him or had heard of the story of his alleged violations of the federal statutes. Mr. Allen came alone, and the new question that is being raised is what has become of Mrs. Allen and the three Allen children, who went to Richmond with the husband and father at the end of the Summer outing a week ago to-day.

BOAT CARNIVAL SEEN BY 50,000

Fifty thousand people crowded on the esplanade of the Charles River Basin last evening and witnessed the first big boat carnival held there for seventeen years. The parade of the motor boats, illuminated with Japanese lanterns and elaborately festooned with gaily colored bunting, was one of the grandest sights ever seen on the river.

Mayor Fitzgerald, at whose suggestion the carnival was held, was congratulated by Mayor Barry of Cambridge for the big success. "It only goes to show that people will be glad to come to this basin if it is made attractive for them," declared Mayor Fitzgerald, remembering the big success of the AMERICAN'S recent swimming meet at the basin. Mayor Fitzgerald led the parade in the Madeline. There were sixty-eight boats in line, with more than eight hundred people on board. Music was furnished by the St. Aloysius Band of seventy-five pieces.

Fifteen thousand people saw the carnival from the Cambridge side of the river. The esplanade near the West Boston Bridge was so crowded that it was impassable. Below Massachusetts avenue Back Bay society was out in full force.

MARVELOUS FISH AT NARRAGANSETT PIER

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Sept. 12.—To-day a fisherman told of catching a twenty-foot blue shark which had entered the fish trap near Indian Rock, doing much damage before it was overpowered and towed to Newport. A 250-pound blue shark measuring seven feet was also found in a net near Point Judith and landed at the pier. The same fisherman tells of subduing a large stingaree after hacking off its powerful tail. Another relates the discovery of a dollar greenback inclosed in a cigar box in one of his lobster pots.

GOATS SKINNED BY KERMIT ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The skeletons and salted hides of three mountain goats killed by Kermit Roosevelt during his recent hunt in Arizona, New Mexico and old Mexico reached the Smithsonian Institution as donations from young Roosevelt. The goats were shot and skinned by Kermit, and in his letter offering the animals to the institution he said he skinned them by moonlight away up in the mountain heights of old Mexico.

METHODISTS WAR ON TAFT AND WILSON

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—A nation-wide campaign against President Taft and Secretaries Knox and Wilson was formally inaugurated to-day by the 20,000 clergymen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Christian Endeavor and 6,000 other societies. The purpose is to obtain a reversal of the action of Secretary of Agriculture Wilson in accepting the presidency of the brewers' convention. Resolutions have been introduced in many cities calling on Wilson to resign from the brewers' body.

THOMAS RYAN'S SON VERY ILL

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Allan A. Ryan, son of Thomas Fortune Ryan, is seriously ill with tuberculosis at Colorado Springs, Col., where he was taken last week. His wife accompanied him.

Mr. Ryan's lungs have been affected for some time. He was ordered to cut short a European trip and come back to this country two months ago. He was hurried to the Adirondacks.

Thomas F. Ryan, the father, was ill just before he sailed for Europe last May but he has regained his health, at least in part at the cures in Germany and Austria. Another son, Thomas F., Jr., died seven years ago after he had spent several months in Arizona.

Since the elder Ryan's retirement from active business several years ago, Allan has been prominent in the affairs once dominated by his father. Thomas F. is said to be worth $50,000,000, and the handling of these interests keep the young man and his two brothers busy.

"UXBRIDGE LOCKUP WORST IN STATE"

UXBRIDGE, Sept. 12.—"Uxbridge has the worst lockup in Massachusetts. It isn't fit for pigs," declares Dr. M. G. Overlook, State inspector of police headquarters and town lockups, who will frame a report urging that his previous recommendations for changes in the cells in the basement of the Town Hall be acted on at once. "The cells are damp, and every time it rains the water floods the floor," he told a reporter to-day. "It is unhealthy in the extreme for men to be put in such a place. The basement is dark and close, and it is a crime that such conditions exist."

PROVIDENCE PLANS BIG MISSION EXHIBIT

Some of the scenery used last Spring in the "World in Boston" exposition in Mechanics building was brought here. A rally was held at Mathewson Street Episcopal Church, presided over by Rev. M. E. Gentor, at which plans were discussed and committees appointed.

A LEGACY OF ILL HEALTH

Don't Let the Debility Which Follows an Attack of the Grip Make an Invalid of You.

After an acute attack of the grip the patient is frequently left in a condition that may mean a lifetime of misery if proper precautions are not taken to restore the blood and drive out the lingering poisons that cause the so-called "after-effects" of the disease.

The grip leaves behind it weakened vital powers, thin blood, impaired digestion and over-sensitive nerves—a condition that makes the system an easy prey to pneumonia, bronchitis, rheumatism, nervous prostration, and even consumption. Too much stress cannot be laid on the importance of strengthening the blood and nerves during convalescence.

"I came down with the grip," says Mrs. R. M. Williams, of Esty, Mich., "and, taking cold when I got up, was sick for two months. I was confined to bed for over three weeks and was practically helpless, having to be turned over in bed. I had no appetite, lost in flesh and had no color. The doctor said I would not be able to get around for a year at least but after being under his care for several weeks and getting no better I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I had taken them before as a tonic with benefit. They helped me during the first week and I took them regularly until cured. I am certain Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People saved me from being a helpless invalid for life."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a certain blood-builder and are especially adapted for the treatment of diseases arising from a lack of blood. Their work is to make new blood. That they do this well is shown by the gradual disappearance of the symptoms and the return of color and strength. They lay the foundation for permanent health in the future.

These pills have cured anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, sciatica, general debility and nervousness and are recommended wherever a blood-builder or a tonic for the nerves is needed.

A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," will be sent free upon request to any one interested.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

Can't You Sleep?

ONE of the most dangerous results of nervousness is Insomnia or Sleepless Nights, preventing, as it does, healthy recuperation and foreshadowing the loss of reason itself. Most remedies for insomnia aim for the effect only. They stupify, depress and deaden, but leave the starved overstrained nerves weaker than ever when the influence of the drug abates.

MOLASSES FLOOD IN NEW ORLEANS

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12.—The sweetest thing that ever happened in New Orleans occurred when tanks containing 5,000,000 gallons of molasses burst in the warehouse of the Sugar Planters' Storage Company.

Part of the commercial district was flooded with a stream of molasses so deep that many persons had narrow escapes from drowning in the sticky stuff.

The people in the street adjoining the burst tanks had to wade through molasses up to their waists, or even to their chins in some instances.

Several persons tried to swim in the molasses, but it was like the antics of a fly on gummy fly paper, and they had to be rescued. There was a general rush for hot baths as soon as those who had been engulfed succeeded in crawling to places of safety.

To repair the breaks in the tanks it was necessary to row boats into the warehouse on the surface of the sticky flood.

For a time it was hoped to save much of the molasses, but a water main broke. The water and the molasses quickly mixed and both disappeared in the sewers. The loss exceeded $200,000.

THE DANGERS OF THE SCHOOL ROOM

What the Little Ones Are Exposed to Every Day. Advice for Mothers.

School room conditions can never be the same as home conditions and they are always a tax on the strength of the little ones. Especially is this true after the long vacation, when the children come in from a summer spent in the open air and are obliged to sit long hours at their desks. Thousands of mothers give their children Father John's Medicine during the opening weeks of school to supply them with the added strength they need at this time. It is safe for them to do so because Father John's Medicine is free from alcohol or dangerous drugs in any form and, besides, it is a pure and wholesome food tonic that gives the little ones health and strength. If the child does catch cold the wise mother gives it Father John's Medicine at once because it cures colds in the natural way by driving out the impurities and strengthening each organ of the body to resume its natural work. Many doctors prescribe Father John's Medicine and have been doing so successfully for over fifty years. It is not a patent medicine, but a doctor's prescription. Get a bottle to-day.

NEW RIVER ROAD FOR MOTORISTS

By J. C. KERRISON.

The opening of the new bridge spanning the Connecticut at Saybrook has added immensely to the popularity of the motor trip along the Connecticut shore. Scores of motorists touring to Boston are using this southern route, as it leads through beautiful country with splendid scenery. From New Haven to New London, several miles of new State road have been completed recently between East Lyme and Lyme, and the entire route, with few minor exceptions, is macadam road.

From New London to Providence via Narragansett Pier, the roads are in good condition with the exception of the one between Stonington and Westerly, where the road is badly worn in places.

Manager Halladay of the Boston Branch of the Thomas Company, with a party of six friends, leaves Buffalo to-day in a 1912 car for a run to Boston. They expect to arrive here early to-morrow morning, after having given the 1912 model a most severe test.

A motorist may find that an inner tube has been injured and perhaps ruined from no apparent cause. Upon examination small holes will be found in its surface, the only logical reason for their presence being apparently poor tube material. This, however, is seldom the cause, says the Michelin Tire man. The real trouble lies with the motorists. He has carelessly fitted the tube, allowing small particles of mud and dirt to enter the envelope, the air pressure from within the tube and the external pressure having combined to grind the foreign matter into the tube.

When fitting a tire, it is not enough to simply clean the envelope and tube. Care should be taken to admit no mud or sand during the operation. The tire levers should not be left lying on the ground, as they will collect dirt, which may find its way into the envelope.

Many subjects on the proper care of tires and tubes are instructively discussed in two books issued by the Michelin Tire Company of Milltown, New Jersey. Copies will be mailed free on request.

Several hundred cars of all makes and sizes, from the lowly runabout to the car of high price and power, are owned by the city of New York at the present time. The heads and sub-heads of departments whose work calls them almost daily to the outlying districts, demand machines with the ability to "get there," and it is with these members of the city government that the Lozier car has found high favor.

With the recent purchase of three Lozier cars by the city of New York, the number of high powered cars of that make now in the service of the metropolis total fifteen, all being used by commissioners or heads of departments.

The wide utility of the automobile, both as a time-saver and from the standpoint of economy in operation, is nowhere better illustrated than in the public service departments of the large cities. Especially is this true of New York City, which has the largest municipality in the country, naturally presents the most difficult transportation problems to its heads of departments.

Each commissioner is expected to exercise a certain amount of personal supervision over his subordinates, but until the advent of the motor car, work of this kind was very ineffective owing to the widely scattered projects in remote parts of the city. That the automobile has revolutionized the system is evident by the increasing orders for machines to be used in the city's many branches.

HARRIMAN SHOPMEN FIRM FOR DEMANDS

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12.—"We have not yet considered the question of a strike of the shop employees. We are still hoping for another conference with Mr. Kruttschnitt, or with the general manager of the Harriman lines. However, we have not and will not modify the demand for recognition of the federation," said J. W. Kline, president of the Blacksmiths' and Helpers' Union of Chicago.

Bachelors' Club Comes to an End When Wedding Ceremony Takes Away Member.

Here is a real Nell Brinkley romance and it comes to light in prosaic modern New England. This Twentieth Century romance is crowned successfully when Howard Gillette, millionaire and president of the famed Bachelor Brigade of Chicago, is married at Biddeford Pool, Me., to Miss Cornelia Forbes Brookmire of St. Louis. Listen to this real romance:

All this past Summer Gillette made the round trip of 3,000 miles every week-end from Chicago to visit his sweetheart over Sunday at Biddeford Pool. Is he not America's champion wooer?

And more romance! Gillette first saw his bride of to-day giving a crowd of poor little kiddies an automobile ride in a Philadelphia park. He did not know who she was. He resolved then and there to find out and to marry her. He did. He was introduced. He found that she was engaged to another.

Clouds Silver Lining.

He joined the Bachelor's Brigade of Chicago. Enter grim tragedy. The fiance of Miss Brookmire killed himself, leaving Miss Brookmire his fortune. She wore mourning for many, many months. Then she smiled again on her persistent suitor. He used up yards of railroad tickets between St. Louis and Chicago.

He gathered but little hope. But he was persistent. Miss Brookmire came East with her family for the Summer. Gillette made the weekly trip as if it were no more than across the street. He won. Hence the marriage to-day. As for the poor old Bachelors' Brigade of Chicago—Boom! It exploded to-day with the marriage of its president. But one member has it left, and he's wavering.

This afternoon the eager lover leads forth his bride from her father's home, for a wedding trip to Washington, after which he will take her back to Chicago with him. The ceremony is performed by a life-long friend of the family, the Rev. Philip Schuyler of Bennington, Vt. The bride is attended by children. Little Miss Mary Frances Joy of New York is maid of honor, and the bridesmaids are Elizabeth Cook and Lucy Fitzhugh Habmitzelle, both of St. Louis. Miss Brookmire's little nephew, Master Alfred Partridge Hebard, Jr., holds the bride's bouquet during the ceremony.

College Men Ushers.

The ushers are all college friends of Mr. Gillette Eames MacVeagh, who succeeds Gillette as president of the Bachelor's Brigade; Harold McCormick, Robert McCormick, and Morris Johnston, all of Chicago; B. N. Norton of Long Island and Walter McKittrick of St. Louis.

The best man, Donald B. Wentz of Philadelphia, was also a classmate of Gillette at Harvard, but his presence in the wedding party has a deeper significance, for he is the brother of Edward Wentz to whom Miss Brookmire was engaged ten years ago, and for love of whom young Wentz committed suicide. There was opposition on the part of Wentz's parents—wealthy Philadelphia aristocrats—to his marrying a Western girl, and since Miss Brookmire would not accept him without his parents' blessing, Wentz shot himself while in the Virginia mountains not far from the $10,000 bungalow which he had been building for a wedding gift to Miss Brookmire. For ten years Miss Brookmire has mourned her early and tragic love, wearing deep black, and refusing to accept the attentions of any of the many suitors who have been fascinated by her sad beauty.

Love That Persisted.

But she had reckoned without Howard Gillette. He first saw her ten years ago as she was automobiling through Wissahicken Park near Philadelphia. By chance he met her shortly afterward at a polo match and from that time on, unobtrusively at first, he pursued his wooing. In a fit of pique because he had lost hope for the time being, he founded the famous Bachelor's Brigade, whose members were supposed to renounce the fair sex. The Brigade lost one president when "Joe" Leiter recanted from his vows. But now, although Eames MacVeagh, a dashing millionaire chum of, Gillette has been elected to succeed him as president, they all admit that the old vim is gone and that the Brigade's days are numbered.

ELSIE JANIS AN AUTO SCORCHER

NEW YORK, Sept. 12.—Miss Elsie Janis came near missing her engagement in Plainfield, N. J., yesterday, after she and her mother and two friends had been taken to the North Bergen police station for automobile speeding.

The big yellow car led one policeman a chase of three miles on the Hudson County boulevard before it was overhauled.

The chauffeur became so conversational that he was taken to Jersey City headquarters. Then Miss Janis drove the car back to North Bergen.

Mrs. Janis opened verbal fire on Policemen Schroeder and Neary, who arrested them. They say, she told them that she had influence, and would have them dismissed if she had to spend $1,000 to do it. Her daughter was an actress, and ought to be exempt from such interference.

When asked how old she was, Mrs. Janis replied, "Twenty-nine."

"Occupation?"

"Just a mother."

"Married or single?"

"Single for the last fifteen years."

When it came to the matter of bail she and a young Englishman in the party produced rolls of bills and carefully selected the crumpled and dirty ones to give to the horrid policemen.

CONFER TO-DAY ON MILK STRIKE

Representatives of the 174 striking milk wagon drivers in Boston will call on the C. Brigham Company, the Elm Farm Milk Company and D. Whiting & Sons to-day in an effort to make their proposition to the contractors more clear. Thomas J. Mahon, business agent of the newly formed Milk Wagon Drivers' Union, states that the men are anxious to make a settlement for the sake of the public and for that reason will submit their differences to the State Board of Arbitration or any other body qualified to consider the question.

The striking drivers decided at a midnight meeting not to call out the drivers of the other milk contractors in sympathy. The drivers of other companies, who attended the meeting in large numbers, left the meeting as soon as this was decided.

Delegations from the striking drivers were appointed to visit the South Boston district to-day and endeavor by peaceful means to persuade the strike-breaking drivers to give up their places.

The midnight meeting was addressed by representatives from the Central Labor Union, the Teamsters' Union and other prominent labor men, and the support of other unions was promised.

Small details of police have been on duty at the various receiving stations of the three companies affected by the strike, but no trouble has occurred. The contractors have put on a number of strike breakers and are making deliveries several hours late.

Men who had not worked in a pair of overalls for years put them on at the station of D. Whiting & Sons in Charlestown when the call came for them to take out wagons in place of the regular drivers. All of the wagons were late in starting.

At the Elm Hill Farm an auto runabout was pressed into service for quick and important deliveries. In this way many babies who require specially prepared milk were supplied. The car was also used to rush milk to the retailers whose supply was quickly exhausted on account of the excessive demand coming from people who had been left without their usual supply.

In case of a general strike, which would cripple milk deliveries throughout the city, the following law would enable local Boards of Health to deal with the situation:

> The eBards of Health of cities and of towns of 10,000 or more inhabitants are hereby authorized, when deemed advisable for the good of the public health, to establish in such cities and towns stations for the distribution of milk, either free of charge, in cases of necessity, or at such charge and under such conditions, rules and regulations as the board may establish; but this act shall not be construed to permit the said boards of health to engage in a general milk business.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

WEST POINT CADETS MAY GET OFF EASY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—The cases of seven Cadets of the West Point Military Academy, convicted by court-martial for breach of diciplne in bringing intoxicants into camp during the Summer encampment, are before Secretary of War Stimson. Instead of dismissal the sentences in some of the cases may be reduced because of extenuating circumstances to periods of suspension and a reduction in class standing.

HURRICANE KILLS 10 IN NICARAGUAN TOWN

CORINTO, Nicaragua, Sept. 12.—Ten lives were lost in a hurricane which swept this city, levelling it to the ground. Although the storm occurred on Sunday, it was not until to-day that communication was restored with the outside world. Many persons were injured and ten city squares wiped out. Thousands are homeless. Great loss is reported from adjacent districts along the Pacific coast.

BOARD FAVORS GRAND TRUNK

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 12.—The Board of Aldermen voted leave to withdraw in an application in the interest of the New Haven railroad to erect two freight sheds at a location that would block the entrance of the Grand Trunk to Providence. This action, which favors the Grand Trunk, reflects the feeling of the business men of this section of the State.

The building of the freight sheds was stopped recently by order of the courts, and the matter is to be argued next Monday in the Superior Court. Business men importuned the aldermen to take action that would be favorable to the Grand Trunk and they did it.

ACCUSE FATHER IN CHILD DEATH CASE

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 12.—Mr. and Mrs. Martin Lemberger, parents of the murdered seven-year-old girl, Annie Lemberger, and their oldest boy, George, nine years old, were taken to the police station immediately upon their return from the funeral. They were taken to the office of Police Chief Shaughnessy to be put through a rigid examination. Police Chief Boyer of Chicago bluntly charged Lemberger with knowledge of Annie's death when he talked with the child's father.

PACKEY MAPS OUT FAST BOUT

By ED W. SMITH.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—Undaunted by the greatness of Champion Ad Wolgast, his aggressive style, his wicked punch or anything that goes to make up the Cadillac star, Packey McFarland, who meets the Michigan wildcat at Milwaukee Friday night, has settled on his plan of battle.

Instead of letting the champion rush him around the ring, and contenting himself with getting in a blow here and there and making his clever footwork carry him away from the rushes and swings of the title holder, the stock yards boy is going to make a stand-up fight of it.

Not once does he plan on retreating. He is going to keep right after the champion from the tap of the gong and prevent, if it is possible, Ad's getting set.

Packey does not fear Wolgast's punch when Ad is not set. He says that the only time the champion's punch is strong is when he is firmly balanced on both feet.

To Do the Leading.

What is more, McFarland says the champion will not be able to do any rushing. Packey has a plan that will upset all of Ad's leads and he says the plan will work perfectly. He figures that Ad's speed is not to be compared with his own and that any lead the champion might make will be far too slow to have any effect.

In talking of Wolgast's punch, Packey says: "Wolgast does not put his men away with a single punch, he wears them down hitting them and finally, when they are in a weakened condition, stows them away. He will never land ten good punches during the entire ten rounds."

And cleverness is not all that McFarland is going to rely on. He says he will mix it whenever the chance presents itself. What is more, he prizes himself on his style of infighting, and declares he will prove the master when they go at it at close range.

Packey has a style of defence for infighting that is hard to penetrate. His hands are at their best and he says he is going to smash for a knockout. Though Packey's recent fight record shows only few knockout, he has stowed away most of the men who have opposed him.

Of some sixty-two battles over 60 per cent. have gone by way of the knockout route.

McFarland has up to to-day worked for speed. He knows he must go at his fastest to bewilder the champion and he believes he has triumphed in his endeavor to get to his speediest notch.

McFarland is now going to go in for the rough stuff. Middleweights are to be his training partners from now on. He plans that there will be some pulling and mauling and he is going to be fit to withstand all the champion can dish out.

Trains Harder Than Ever.

Packey has heard all sorts of stories regarding Wolgast. He has been censured and has had many unkind words fall on his ears, yet he has gone along without a murmur.

He is sure he can trim this Michigan fighter and he is doing nothing that will give him any worry. He wants to be fit and he is paying strict attention to his work. Pat is strictly in the hands of his manager, Emil Thiry, and Emil is watching him closely. Thiry realizes the importance of this mill and he has McFarland always at his side. They sleep together, eat together and travel together. Thiry is the cook.

Packey can hold his own in any style of milling. He is ready to take Ad no matter what way it comes. All kinds of dope is being brought to bear in comparing Wolgast and McFarland in an endeavor to try and show why one or the other should be favorite.

There have been some stories to the effect that Wolgast was altogether too strong for McFarland, that Packey could not stand the gaff, etc.

There was one instance where Packey showed he could take a punch, and that was when he fought Cyclone Johnny Thompson at Kansas City November 8, 1909. At that time Larney Lichtenstein was managing Thompson, and Johnny was supposed to be a lightweight. He wanted to make a match at 135 pounds at 3 o'clock, but McFarland's manager hesitated.

Shows Gameness

Then Thompson's manager changed and insisted upon 133 pounds at 3 o'clock or ringside, and offered to put up $500 forfeit for weight.

Packey's manager fell for the bluff, with the result that Thompson went into the bout, so Lichtenstein avers, at 152 pounds, the match finally being made at catchweights. It was giving away a lot of weight to a strong boy like Thompson, but Packey did not complain when he saw what he was up against. Thompson jarred Packey pretty hard at times and roughed matters, but the stock yards boy never backed away, and mixed when the occasion demanded.

It was one of the hardest fights McFarland ever had, but he proved his gameness and ability to take a wallop.

Again on September 9, 1909, when Packey fought Ray Bronson at New Orleans he showed his gameness and stamina. In the first round Bronson worked a new one on the Chicago lad. It was not a pivot, as some claimed, but a legitimate blow delivered with the left in making a quick turn on the heel when in a clinch.

Bronson worked it to perfection and caught Packey flush on the jaw. He went for the count of eight or nine and Pat Kenneally, who then acted as Packey's trainer and manager, called out in a lisping voice:

"For goodness sake, Packey, stay down for nine."

Packey Has Good Head.

Packey was badly dazed, but he knew enough to take the benefit of the count and it was fortunate that it came near the end of the round, as otherwise it might have been all day with the ten count going on.

Bronson was afraid to rush and take a chance and that helped Packey till he began to be himself after that first round jolt and then he went in and made a splendid finish, earning a draw.

It showed plainly that he has the right kind of noodle and also the ability to take a punch and come back.

CHANCE DEFENDS CLARK GRIFFITH

By BILL BAILEY.

CHICAGO, Sept. 12.—West Side fans and the fellows who see most of their baseball from the stands of the new Polo Grounds in New York, are by no means the only fellows who are scrapping as a result of this red hot race for a pennant in the National League.

Manager Frank Chance of the Cubs gave John McGraw, the boss of the Polo Ground outfit, one of the most artistic verbal trimmings of the year and if the West Siders can do to the Giants what the P. L. did to "Muggsy," the New Yorkers have the short end of the argument.

Blames McGraw For Race.

Probably you have been reading about Griffith. They have taken his job away, according to the stories which have come out of Cincinnati. They have held him responsible personally for the disappointing showing of the Reds.

Chance is right there with a defence of Griff. And he is also there with the charge that the mismanagement of McGraw will be one of the most potent factors if the Cubs should lick the Giants in this pennant struggle.

"Let's dispose of this Cincinnati case first," said the P. L. "Here is a fellow who is receiving the worst of it. The Cincinnati fans had an idea they were going to win the pennant.

"On paper the Red team was a strong one. But there was one thing which the paper estimate failed to show. And that was the fact that the pitchers would refuse to perform as well as the dope showed they should.

Pitchers Are Bad.

"Griffith didn't get any pitching until the last month. The moment he got anything resembling good pitching he had a ball club. One that could play real baseball and give anybody in the league a fight.

"Had Griffith had the pitching all the year that he is now receiving he would have been up in the race. He would have been a hero in Cincinnati and you wouldn't have heard a word about a successor being sought.

"In the case of Griff the difference between being this hero and being the butt of everybody's attack lay in the pitchers. If they pitched Griff was the hero. They didn't and Griff was attacked. Griff himself, the man personally, had no more to do with determining whether his reputation should suffer than I did.

"Now that's the case of Griff. The crowning blow was struck when McGraw shouted that if he had the Reds he would win the pennant. I want to say that if Griff had the Giants he would be so far in the lead that the race would be over.

Giants a Good Team.

"Take a glance at that New York ball club. For the first two-thirds of the journey it was by far the best club in the league. Marquard is a wonderful pitcher this year. Mathewson is great. They had the material in the remainder of the staff to get good pitching all the time. McGraw had the hitters and he had the fielders. He had the baserunners and he had everything that should have given him the pennant in a runaway race.

"Right now the Cubs have as good a chance as the Giants. And the only reason this is true is because McGraw didn't begin to get out of his team what he could have. When McGraw says that with the Reds he could have won a pennant it's a joke.

"For I am as firmly convinced as I am that we will finally lick the Giants that with the New York outfit Griff would have made a joke of the race and would now be ten games in front.

Slap at Muggsy.

"Profiting by the mistakes of your enemy is one way of winning a pennant. I'm glad that the Giants were managed by McGraw and not by the man whom everybody seems to delight in pounding. I mean Clark Griffith."

BUCK CROUSE STILL TOPPLING THEM OVER

ALTOONA, Pa., Sept. 12.—Buck Crouse of Pittsburg had little trouble in knocking out Billy Clark of Philadelphia in the third round of a six-round bout at the Mishler Theatre last evening. In the first round Clark led off strong to Crouse's jaw, but the latter came back with a right hook to Clark's stomach. In the second round Clark showed flashes of form, but a terrific left to the jaw floored him. The bell saved him. The third round lasted only a moment. Left and right hooks to the jaw ended the fight.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12.—Manager Donovan of the Red Sox announced this morning that he would make another change in his infield to-day. Patsy contemplates sending Yerkes to third and Williams to first in place of Engle. Carlstrom, the youngster who reported to the Sox yesterday, will be given a chance to play short.

The pitching selection was another thing that worried Donovan to-day, as he is anxious to cop this game from the Senators. Pat does not like the second division company, and is hoping to get his team going before it is too late.

Hagerman will be given a chance to-day to show what he has got in the pitching line, and Nunamaker will go behind the bat. Becker will work for Washington. The change in the infield of the Sox will also mean a change in the batting order, but Donovan at this early hour had not settled on his batting order for the afternoon.

Chester Bernard, the lightweight, who fought several good battles in England the past two years, is in town looking for work. Bernard is ready to meet any of the lightweights in New England. He says that he would like to get a chance against Martin Canob in Fall River.

CLOSE RED SOX SALE THIS WEEK

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 12.—It can be stated positively that the deal whereby James McAleer, at present manager of the Washington Club, will become owner of the Boston American Club, will be closed this week. It is known that President Johnson of the American League, telegraphed McAleer to meet him in Boston next Thursday, at which time all details will be agreed to and the papers signed.

The Boston players and Manager Donovan cannot figure that Mr. Taylor is through with baseball as he has shown unusual aptitude in the matter of securing players of the first class, and should the Reds be disposed of, it is thought that perhaps he has his eyes on the Boston National League outfit. It is known that President Taylor and President Johnson have not been in accord for the past two years, and this, perhaps, is the reason why the former is ready to quit the American League.

During the last Western trip of the Washington Club, Manager McAleer is reported to have met Mat. Killelea, of Milwaukee, at one time a magnate in the American League and who is to-day very close to President Johnson, and Charley Somers of the Cleveland club, in the Chicago office of Mr. Johnson. These two gentlemen are supposed to be backing McAleer in the Boston venture, Mac. of course chipping in a big slice of the purchase money. Just who will manage the Washington club next season is guess work, but the choice lies between Herman Schaeffer and George McBride, the local owners having decided that a playing manager is about the right thing for the Nationals.

The debut of Young Bushelman yesterday can be classed as successful although his first inning was something of a nightmare. The youngster has a world of speed and when he once gets control, he will surely be a winner. A majority of six hits made by Washington yesterday were of the lucky sort. Manager Donovan had decided on Cicotte to work yesterday, but on account of the wet grounds sent in young Bushelman. To-day Eddie will be pitted against Bob Groom, and a close battle should result.

NUTMEG CHAMPIONS TO PLAY WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Sept. 12.—Jesse Burkett and his aggregation of Worcester ball players will leave this city early this morning for Springfield, where they will tackle the champions of the Connecticut League this afternoon in the first of a series of three exhibition games. All the members of the local team, with but few exceptions, will make the trip.

SALISBURY PUT AWAY BY RYAN

WESTFIELD, Sept. 12.—Tommy Ryan of New York knocked out Kenneth Salisbury of Boston in the sixth round of an eight-round bout at the City A. C. last night. Ryan led from the start and had little difficulty in disposing of Salisbury, being hard pressed at no time.

Ryan gave a clever exhibition of boxing, landing telling head and body blows at will. He had Salisbury in a bad way in the fifth, but the gong saved the Boston man. Ryan followed up his advantage in the sixth, flooring Salisbury three times before he produced the knockout. Salisbury substituted for Jack Curran of Springfield, who sprained his knee in training.

In the preliminaries Chick West of Holyoke knocked out Billy Roche of this town in the last round of a six-round go. Young O'Neil of Bennington, Vt., won from Kid Bardo of North Adams in the other preliminary.

MONTE ATTELL AND TOMMY DIXON DRAW

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 12.—The 10-round fight between Tommy Dixon of Kansas City and Monte Attell of San Francisco at the New Orleans A. C. last night resulted in a draw decision, although the crowd believed Dixon had a shade the better of the argument at the end.

Both men weighed in at 126 pounds, although Attell looked fat and slightly flabby. In the opening Attell opened up strong and in his old style. For the first four rounds he clearly had the better of Dixon, but in the fifth Attell began to fail and Dixon evened the fighting considerably.

ANOTHER LEWIS FOR BOSTON AMERICANS

When the Red Sox team returns to Boston another Lewis besides the well-known Duffy may be included in their ranks. The newcomer is Jack Lewis, a second baseman, secured from the Wheeling, West Virginia team upon the recommendation of Doc. Casey. Lewis is twenty-four years of age, is said to be very fast on his feet, a clever fielder and better than the average hitter.

FIGHT A DRAW.

INDIANAPOLIS, Sept. 12.—Jack Herrick of Chicago and Steve McGinley of Memphis went 10 rounds to a draw before the Dillon A. C. last night. McGinley led in the earlier rounds and Herrick led after the sixth.

There is no desire on our part to be peevish. We have long since ceased to worry over the petty thieving that is going on—all the time—stealing from somebody else's reputation. It has always existed and always will exist.

For 20 years we have been in the tailoring business at 96 Court Street.

During that time we have established styles—standardized prices—and adopted such clean and high-grade methods of doing business in tailoring that the entire community has benefited by our endeavor.

Our plans have been stolen—our employees bribed for information—our system copied—our circulars and advertising ideas used bodily—word for word—by tailors and clothiers—all over the country.

But we have uttered no word of complaint. Our business was on the increase—and this Fall it already had started with a most phenomenal rush.

Ordinarily we would make no comment on imitations—but there has been such an unusual crop of them—this Fall—that we feel that it is our duty to warn the public against one especially flagrant abuse of business ethics. We refer to the steals from our famous registered trade-mark of "the-front-that-won't-break-down."

This pattern was worked out by us—year after year—adapted to the incoming styles of each season—and finally we decided to register the pattern and design for the protection of ourselves and the public.

We paid the legal fees—the design you see above is our own design—it cannot be used by anybody else—legally.

Imitations you can get anywhere. But the original cannot be found outside of a Gale & Kent coat. And the best thing about it is that it costs nothing for this great original feature—you get it in every coat built here—without asking for it.

Our prices are $15 to $25 for suit (or overcoat) and we imitate nobody. We are the original popular-price tailors of Boston—and the enormous volume of business done here is all done on the level. No imitations.

Do you get us?

Battling Nelson Tells Boys How to Become Great Boxers

By BATTLING NELSON.

[illegible] Boston [illegible]

[illegible] Battling Nelson was a [illegible] offered me [illegible] that a boxer [illegible] success [illegible] muscles [illegible] keep [illegible]

Advice to Boxers

When [illegible] food [illegible] sweets [illegible] As a rest [illegible] fairly good [illegible] blows [illegible] would get sick.

If a boy desires to enter the ring he should be encouraged to do so. The trouble with most kids is that after they have won a couple of fights their head swells to about ten times its normal size. They begin hitting the high [illegible] while they are in the DOWN and OUT class.

No Money for Near-Stars

There is no money in the boxing game unless you are a star. I myself have made several thousand dollars [boxing]. But before I could demand [illegible] I had to show the goods to the public and promoters.

My first fight was [illegible] I was only fourteen years old [illegible] had just come to town and [illegible] big husky [illegible] was his [illegible]

The manager of the [illegible] was very desirous of getting somebody to go on with the husky. When I told them I would fight the terror they laughed at me. But after I had stripped and shown them my muscles they matched me with the great unknown.

Finally the time for the battle arrived [illegible]

[illegible] to the lumps [illegible] whose [illegible] and wasn't [illegible] had played [illegible] nobody [illegible]

Nelson's Last Fight.

[illegible] Long [illegible] nothing more than a poor [illegible] who doesn't know the first [illegible] the boxing game [illegible] to the jaw and [illegible] and then you will see him flop [illegible]

And Gaffney's friends [illegible] was [illegible]

[illegible] the day of the fight [illegible] of Medford [illegible] citizens were [illegible]

As [illegible] Gaffney met me in the center of the ring [illegible] it looked as though I had struck a tartar, but I steadied myself and got to work [illegible] before the round ended.

In the second round Gaffney was [illegible] and resorted to [illegible] I [illegible] a couple of left [illegible] his liver which has [illegible] during his entire [illegible] made the bout rather interesting.

When [illegible] I am prepared [illegible] and, as I was going fast at the finish, failed to hear the signal for time. I hooked a light left to Gaffney's head (it would not dent a soft hat). Gaffney looked around at me, then at the referee, took two steps forward and dove on his head, grabbed his stomach, claiming foul. Now do you think a game fighter would resort to any means like that? That satisfied me that he was not game and if I hit him he would soon quit. In the third and fourth rounds I dropped him twice for the count. Really I am surprised to think that he got up after hitting the floor.

The Downfall of a Champ

In the fifth round when things began to look bad for Gaffney after I [illegible] to his corner [illegible] the ropes and cried out so that everybody around the ring could hear him: "I can't stand any more of this. I am going to quit." And the referee immediately awarded me [the decision, as] any honest referee would do, the decision.

Directly after I was declared the winner Gaffney rushed at the referee, attempting to slug him. The referee happened to be somewhat of a fighter and jugged him one on the jaw which made him quit again.

The Gaffney type of boxers are the ones that hurt the game all over the country and should be barred. They queered boxing in Medford at least for the present.

If the public want my opinion I want to say that crooked boxers, referees and promoters, as well as rowdies (and there are a few in the game) should be barred from every city and blacklisted throughout the country. Then we would get boxing, which to my way of thinking is the greatest and most manly athletic sport known to the whole world, in the position it should occupy.

I have already started my training for the Nixon fight. I realize that Billy is a pretty tough customer and so don't intend to take any chances. Yesterday I had a rattling good workout.

I got up promptly at 7 o'clock and had breakfast. After eating I hung around the hotel for an hour or so and then went to the Armory. My next task was to take a spin over the roads for about six miles. By this time I had worked up a healthy sweat. After a rub down by Jack Edwards I went back to the hotel and had lunch.

By 3 o'clock I was back at the Tremont street club again. This time I restricted myself entirely to working at the [illegible] and boxing. First I played [illegible] with a kid by the name of Harold Edson. He is a speedy youngster and kept me on the jump for all of nine minutes.

The next thing I did was to use the pulleys and dumb bells for two or three minutes.

I finished my day's training by boxing two rounds with Mark Conley of South Boston and two rounds with Harold Edson. This workout proved to me that I am possibly not in as good condition now as when I won the lightweight crown from Joe Gans out in Frisco on July 4, 1908, but still I feel more like working after my rest. I can punch just as hard and by the end of the week will be in regular condition.

In to-morrow's article I will tell some more of my plans in regard to the future. I will also give some inside dope about some of our present day pugilistic stars, and the Gotch-Hackenschmidt wrestling match, dealing in particular about the big fights which are to be pulled off in the near future.

"CLEAR of that shed and of [illegible] wharf. Then once out o[illegible] town we've got a clear run [illegible] strike De Brigard's outposts. It [illegible] simply a matter of [illegible] them and [illegible]."

"It's [illegible]," she sobbed.

He [illegible] coat and dropped a [illegible] pocket, and after them [illegible] handful.

Then [illegible] moments' thought he crossed the cabin again and leaned over the open [illegible].

"I've got [illegible] pocketful of milk tablets here," he explained, "and a pound or two of German army chocolate."

"Quite Ready"

He swung about and looked at her with his almost [illegible] smile.

"And I'm terribly sorry [illegible] isn't sweetened," he said. Although there was no answering smile on her face, he thought he saw a fleeting look of gratitude in her eyes, as though she was struggling to thank him for even his foolish and futile efforts at lightheartedness. And when she still gravely looked up at him he slipped his huge wicker-covered brandy flask into his hip pocket and once more consulted his watch.

"Our time's up," he said, with every semblance of levity [illegible] fading from his face. It tortured him to see such resigned hopelessness in [illegible] eyes, but [illegible] to surrender to [illegible].

"I know [illegible] was [illegible]," he said [illegible].

"I understand."

He [illegible] hand on the light switch.

"[illegible] right to take along with [illegible]?"

"Nothing," she whispered.

"Then [illegible] ready."

"Quite ready," was her answer.

She [illegible] of the light switch. She heard him [illegible] the key in the cabin door. She knew, as she stood with her hand on his sleeve, that he was listening and waiting for the sentry's steps.

He waited [illegible] they passed and [illegible] away [illegible] of the ship. Then he [illegible] door and drew her out after [illegible] darkness of the [illegible].

Dropped From Deck

[illegible] across [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] one of the [illegible]. They slipped in under the [illegible] of his lifeboat [illegible] where the [illegible] rail ended.

Before them was a [illegible] feet from the [illegible] of the pier, against which the [illegible] was [illegible] and groaning.

McKinnon [illegible] for the [illegible] dark [illegible] moving [illegible] weight [illegible] shed, its oxid-red paint leaving it black by night.

She could see that the west door of the shed was open, and that a figure stood just inside this door, holding a lantern. She knew it was the officer, for she could see the light glimmer on the sword-scabbard that moved back and forth with every movement of his body.

She could see, too, that he was contentedly smoking a cigarette. She could even smell the tobacco smoke, mingled with the heavy odor of a decaying shipments of bananas that rotted farther out along the pier edge.

She could hear low voices now and then speaking cautiously in Spanish as two bare-footed soldiers padd'ed past the swinging lantern in through the door. They carried a heavy box that reminded her of a baby's coffin, and as they came out again two others passed them on their way in.

Then she felt McKinnon touch her arm warningly, and heard his quick whisper for her to be ready. She could also hear the slow tread of the sentry's feet behind her to the north of the shielding lifeboat.

"Now's our chance," McKinnon was saying in her ear. He dropped silently over the deck-edge. She could just make out the white patch of his face as he stood there waiting to lift her down.

She knew no emotion beyond a vague and persistent anxiety as she felt his arms clasp her surrendering body. The moment's intimate contact brought her neither joy nor repugnance.

She only knew that McKinnon was leading her by the hand to the far end of the shed that faced the west. Then he took away his hand and drew a revolver from his pocket. It struck her that the odor from the rotting banana pile was becoming almost unendurable.

Followed Blindly

She followed him blindly, her outstretched fingers keeping in touch with his coat sleeve. She saw him step in over the railway tracks that were bridged by the shed. A broken right angle of light, from the lantern within, outlined the huge, loosely fitting door that covered the west end of the black boarded building.

In this huge door a smaller one had at some time been cut. It was through this smaller door that McKinnon led her, cautious and noiselessly.

The track motor stood backed almost against the eastern end of the shed, next to the door through which the barefooted soldiers were carrying the heavy boxes. The officer with the lantern still kept his position just inside this door, placidly smoking his cigarette.

The girl and McKinnon had to stoop low to keep in the shadow of the square-topped heavy-bodied motor car. They crouched in under its acetylenes, close to the rust-covered many-dented circulating coil, as a cartridge box was lifted into the body of the car by the two bare-footed carriers with a muffled thump as the weight was released, and then the grating wood again as the box was pushed and twisted and jerked into position.

They could hear the sigh of one of the [illegible] the pad of bare feet, and the monotonous, "Forty-three, forty-four," of the counting officer.

It was then that McKinnon lifted her bodily into the driving-seat, whispering to her to sit low, even catching at her outstretched hand and conveying to it the starting lever.

"Start as the door opens," she heard him whisper, and she knew that he had crept forward again and that she was alone in the car. She tried to school herself [illegible] almost to coerce her attention on which was the starting-lever, to force into life the hope that all might still turn out well. Once free of that door she felt she could breathe again.

She waited, straining through the dim light, wondering what kept McKinnon so long.

Then the quietness was broken by the sudden sound of metal rasping on metal, of a falling piece of wood that echoed cavernously through the high-roofed shed.

"Who is there?" cried the startled officer, in Spanish, as he swung about with his lantern. He whipped out a revolver from his belt as he repeated the challenge. The door had not opened. They were shut in, trapped.

Borrowing

By THE GENTLEWOMAN

"WHO goeth a-borrowing goeth a-sorrowing," wrote a sixteenth century scribe, and the same opinion seems to have been held by a wealthy American who died recently, and who enjoined his daughter in his will to lend no money to others nor endorse for others. Rather give what you can afford, he advises, "and let it go at that." More than one great man has held the same views. Shakespeare's dictum on the subject is well known, and Ruskin held very strong opinions. "Starve and go to Heaven, but don't borrow," he said. In our own time George Bernard Shaw said: "Imagine being married to a borrower," as if no worse fate could be conceived.

It may perchance be that one of these gentlemen was never in dire extremity, that they had never been reduced to their last farthing. On the other hand, it is more probable that by "borrower" they mean the habitual annexer of other people's money, the individual who, though unable to [illegible] and ashamed to beg, is never backward in borrowing, while repayment never enters into his calculations.

The borrower is born, not made. [illegible] knows or some [illegible] has the time and the [illegible] together. [illegible] borrower never knows [illegible] when they are in [illegible] impoverished [illegible] engaged in interesting [illegible] The astute borrower [illegible] prospective [illegible] has [illegible] perfect [illegible] desired [illegible] leaving [illegible]

Of course [illegible] of borrowing [illegible] women [illegible] to borrowing [illegible] which [illegible] the borrower [illegible] the species [illegible] [illegible] for years [illegible]

When You Get It

BY KENNETT HARRIS

IT is fine to have an object in your life, a grand ambition,
To be willing to work hard for an attainable position.
It is well to be a hustler, it's great to be a schemer—
If your schemes are money makers and you're not an idle dreamer.
You can burn your oil at midnight, work the clock around the dial,
Rob your life of joy and pleasure with the sternest self-denial,
[illegible] longing to your bosom, cuddle, cherish it and pet it,
But I hope you don't imagine you'll be happy when you get it.

There's a girl you've got your eye on, the divinest kind of creature,
A superb perfect being, you suppose, in form and feature,
With [illegible] more than soulful and a mind that's most discerning,
[illegible] perhaps she's heartless, that is something you are learning.
Well, [illegible] roses we would rather have a bean of thorn and bramble!
When the baby got the soap he wasn't satisfied, I'll gamble.
You [illegible] a longing for her love that soon will win it, if you let it,
But I hope you don't imagine you'll be happy when you get it.

[illegible] you're [illegible] a decent person, and you're not a money-grubber,
You [illegible] for fame of some sort that will make the people rubber,
You [illegible] treat the people with the tenderest affection,
[illegible] born of a desire for nomination and election.
But it's seldom there's not something in attainment rather clashes,
[illegible] the fruit our mouths have watered for is not mere dust and ashes.
[illegible] per contra, up to date I haven't met it,
So I hope you don't imagine you'll be happy when you get it.

I'LL FOIL YOU YET, CLAUDE ECLAIRE, YOU BUNK HERO. YOUR ROSAMOND MUST BE MY WIFE IN SPITE OF ALL!
I'LL PAINT YOU THE COLOR OF THE ZEBRA DESMOND AND LET IT RUN INTO THE WILD WHERE YOU WILL BE SHOT
WHAT A FINE SPECIMEN OF ZEBRA. WE'LL PRESENT IT TO THE MUSEUM!
CURSES! THE HUNTERS DO NOT HEAR MY CRIES!
LUCKY WE DIDN'T SHOOT. THIS IS A PHENOMENAL SCENE A ZEBRA SHEDDING IT'S SKIN. I MUST PHOTOGRAPH IT AT ONCE
IT'S ONLY CLOTH, NOT SKIN. THE ANGRY ZEBRA IS TEARING THE POOR FELLOW'S CLOTHES. THERE HAS BEEN FOUL PLAY
SAVED. LUCKY I MADE THE ZEBRA ANGRY. THE WILD MEN TIED ME HERE KIND SIRS!

THE HUNTERS BELIEVED MY STORY AND RELEASED ME. FOLLOW ME, CHIEF GORGOL AND PALS!
I MUST HAVE THAT GAL ROSAMOND
HORRORS! DESMOND IS ALIVE. WE MUST VAULT THIS IRON FENCE OR WE ARE LOST!
HERSHFIELD

Claude Eclaire, hero, with the aid of a pot of paint and a brush, replaces the faded stripes on the clothes of Desmond, villain. As the scoundrel is tied to a zebra (the stripes of which do not indicate a felonious nature) he will not be distinguished by any hunters.

Sure enough, the hunters spot the zebra to which Desmond is tied and prepare to shoot it. The hunters intend to present the animal to the museum, as it is such a fine specimen. This excuses their slaughter of a harmless creature which they will not use for food or in any other way.

But imagine the astonishment of the hunters when they see the striped skin of the zebra flying into the air. A snake will shed its skin, but no zebra had ever before been known to do so. Accordingly the chief hunter resolves to photograph the memorable scene.

So the faunal naturalists are enabled to ascertain the facts. The smoke from Desmond's cigarette has irritated the zebra (as it should all properly constituted creatures) and the animal has torn the striped clothes off Desmond and thrown them far into the air.

Up come the Wild Men, those black fiends who serve with such mistaken loyalty the great white villain. They restore Desmond his hat, and you will agree with me that he needs it, for without his lid he looks an awful lowbrow. Pleased over his escape, he plans new villainy

"I'm the boy!" cried Desmond, "and I'll have the girl!" He and the black scoundrels are in hot pursuit of Claude and Rosamond, who are mounted upon a steed of doubtful speed. In any event the lovers face a high, spiked fence. What can they do? See tomorrow.

Do You Do Any of These Things?

Avoid the Pestiferous Practices That Exasperate Your Family and Your Friends

By DOROTHY DIX.

IT is unfortunate that in an overcrowded world we have to live so close together. We get on other people's nerves, and they get on ours, and we mutually harass and worry each other.

Probably there is not one of us who has not some little irritating habit, or peculiarity, that is a continual annoyance to every one with whom we come in contact, and that makes us all but unbearable to the unfortunates who are doomed to live under the same roof with us.

Considering that suicide is not only unpleasant, but unpopular, and illegal, and that we can't get off of the earth, nor can we seek a lodge in some vast wilderness, even if we wanted to, it is up to all of us to try to make ourselves as little obnoxious as possible to our fellow-creatures.

Therefore, as a mere starter, consider the following list of unpleasantnesses in others and ask yourself if you are guilty of doing any of them.

In the Family Circle

DO YOU—

In the family circle——

Read aloud to people who are already reading themselves?

Read aloud choice excerpts from a paper to a person who has just read that same paper?

Repeat all the chestnutty jokes in the comic papers that everybody has read?

Absent-mindedly refuse to listen to what is being said until a long story has been told, and then require it to be all repeated again?

Have everything that is said remind you of something that occurred when you were a little girl or boy?

When the mail is brought in, do you turn and twist every letter, scrutinizing its postmark, and handwriting, and speculating about whom it is from before you hand it over to its rightful owner?

Are you filled with ungodly curiosity about everything that everybody else in the family does?

Do you demand to know of all the other members of the family who go outside of the house, where they have been, why they went, whom they saw, what they said and why they didn't see the people that they didn't see?

Do you simply grunt when spoken to when you are in the privacy of the home circle?

Do you habitually throw cold water on every plan that is proposed?

Do you consider that you have the right to boss every one of your household because he, or she, had the misfortune to be married to you, or to be blood kin to you?

Among Friends

DO YOU—

Among friends——

Spend your time talking about your troubles?

Are you guilty of forever reminiscencing about your travels, and what you saw in Europe and what you did in California?

Do you brag about your success and your triumphs?

Do you make long-suffering people stand for anecdotes about your children and infantile bon mots?

Do you spend weary hours explaining the mechanism and the advantages of your automobile to people who haven't a wheelbarrow and couldn't run one if they had it?

Do you talk endless shop to people who haven't any interest in any business but their own?

Do you consider that being an individual's friend gives you the right to police that person's life and pick out his or her amusements, friends and clothes?

Do you consider that friendship gives you the right to monopolize another individual?

Do you butt into your friend's affairs with all manner of uncalled for advice?

Do you get grouchy because your friends won't get mad with other people because you are mad with them and won't go to your milliner and dressmaker and doctor?

Do you consider that friendship is another name for borrowing, and that you have a right to use your friend's belongings as if they were your own?

Do you descend on your friends, bag and baggage, without waiting for the formality of an invitation, or the decency to find out whether your presence will be convenient or not?

In Public

DO YOU—

In public——

Sit in a street car with your legs crossed and your feet sticking out in the aisle, where they will rub off on everybody's clothes?

Do you sprawl over as much space as possible in a crowded car?

If you have bags, do you set them out in the aisle, where everybody will have to fall over them and crawl over them?

Do you glare at everybody that jostles you as if you owned the car?

In going up the subway steps, or in any narrow place, where there are a hundred hurrying people behind you trying to make a train, do you zig-zag leisurely along, apparently trying to get in everybody's way?

In a crowded theatre aisle, do you stop to exchange fervent greetings with an old friend, and ask a hundred fool questions, while you block the way for all of the audience that is behind you?

When you go to the theatre, do you talk so that nobody within six feet of you can hear a word that is said on the stage?

Do you explain the plot of the play to your companion, under the apparent impression that he or she is too idiotic to comprehend it herself or himself?

Between the acts, do you relate in a loud voice how much better you have seen the play done in London or Paris?

At the opera, do you hum along with the orchestra so that those near you can only hear your asinine bray instead of Caruso or Mary Garden that they have paid 'steen dollars to hear?

In shops, do you make poor, tired sales girls pull down things you've got no idea on earth of buying?

And, if you are behind the counter, do you treat every woman who hasn't got on diamonds and sealskin and isn't buying ten dollar silk stockings, as if she were such a worm of the dust that she wasn't worth your condescending notice?

If you do any—or all—of these things, have pity upon those who must associate and live with you and quit 'em. There's no time for reforming like the present.

No Wonder

THE smoke curled out of the windows in thick, black clouds. Flames shot out, and it was evident that the building was doomed. But the firemen were working bravely and all the men, women and children were saved.

Suddenly a young woman rushed up to a fireman, her hair hanging down her back and her eyes wide open with horror.

"Save it!" she cried, pointing to a second floor window. "Save it, for it is not mine."

"How old was it?" asked a lady of the distressed one.

"Only a month, and he is coming back without it!"

"Madam," said the fireman, "I could find no child."

"Child!" screamed the woman. "I said nothing about a child."

"What, then?" asked the puzzled fireman.

"A phonograph I had on the instalment system."

Then she fainted.

THE REASON WHY

See the girl!

The girl is falling upon the neck of the man.

Does the girl fall upon the neck of the man because they are alone in the gloaming?

Partly.

Chiefly, however, the girls falls upon the neck of the man because she is learning to ride the bicycle, and the man is her instructor, and she chooses to fall on any neck rather than her own.

STOPS YOUR HAIR FALLING OUT AND DISSOLVES DANDRUFF AT ONCE

Your hair appears soft, lustrous, fluffy and abundant after using a little Danderine.

What causes Dandruff, itchy scalp and falling hair? Who cares—so long as Danderine overcomes this—and it does, and quickly, too—it does more, it grows hair and we can prove it.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting all over the scalp.

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove to yourself to-night—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

His Greatest Scene

BY PAUL VILLIERS

IN the Summer of 1788 Pierre Egremont spent his vacation in Normandy, and when he returned there was something in his manner which surprised his friends.

He had always been a queer fellow, for, although he was a scion of one of France's noblest families, he was an actor. London had admired his genius. Paris had honored her famous son, and, just when every-one was raving about this, he went off to Normandy.

He had been there before, for the old-fashioned province had always had an irresistible charm for this man, who was often tired of all the honors that were showered upon him, and which he hardly cared for any more. This visit, however, was different from all his former ones. The old inn was the same, the grapevines that covered its walls were the same and the vineyards of the surrounding country that had produced many a bottle of the choice wine that had brightened the eyes of the many beauties with whom he had supped in Paris were the same. For you must remember that Pierre Egremont was a famous actor, and a man of this kind is always the target for all the intrigues that Eve has taught her beautiful daughters. She had not taught Babette any, for Babette was beautiful, but knew nothing of intrigues.

Babette wore a plain linen dress and wooden shoes and knew nothing of the ways of the great world. What did she know about boulevards and theatres? And, during the days that followed their first meeting, Pierre was charmed by her refreshing innocence.

Place for Romances

Normandy is the place for romance, and this one progressed rapidly, for the old woman, owner of the inn, who knew Pierre well, was not worried because her niece spent so many hours in his company.

"Monsieur looks after Babette," she said. "Babette is in good hands when she is with him." And she was right.

Babette's innocence protected her as nothing else could have done. For the first time in many years, Pierre Egremont was conquered by a new feeling, and he thought of somebody besides himself, and thought honestly.

To the young girl, he was like a charmed being from another sphere, a God who had come to make the vineyards more beautiful still, and whom she adored without suspecting her idol's too worldly temperament or the thoughts that raced through his brain as they walked side by side through the vineyards.

He might marry whenever he felt like it. Marriage had heretofore never figured among his follies, and many a time he had held back the words that came to his lips, for Pierre's God was ambition. He was a great actor, but he aimed higher still. Babette was the first woman he had ever loved, but socially she was impossible. He thought of her in the midst of Paris society, and shook his head.

It would never do. If he ever married his wife must be some great lady of the noblest blood. But the days grew into weeks, and he was still stopping at the little inn, though every day brought him scores of scented letters, letters which deplored his absence and said teasing things about a new love. He tore them all up every morning and went out walking with Babette.

Sunny Hours

Sunny hours these were, with no hint about the clouds that were gathering, and when Pierre thought of her feelings he calmed his conscience, telling himself that she was a child, who would soon forget, without even thinking of the fact that the child had become a young woman.

At least the inevitable "good bye" came, and, though Pierre said it was merely "au revoir," Babette knew better.

"You will never come back here, monsieur," she said, and looked at him with eyes from which all joy had fled.

"Why not, Babette?"

"I do not know, monsieur. I just feel it here," she said and pressed her hand against her aching heart.

"We shall meet again, child," said Pierre with a forced smile, "perhaps in Paris."

She drew a deep sigh.

"Paris! Yes, monsieur! Perhaps we shall meet in Paris, but never here any more. Something tells me so."

"Then let me know when you come to Paris, Babette," Pierre replied, and, when he saw the sorrow in her eyes, he suddenly bent down and kissed her for the first time.

* * *

"I want to go to Paris, auntie."

"But, Babette, dear——"

"I must go."

"It is impossible!"

Off to Paris

This was the conversation that was repeated every day after Pierre Egremont's departure, until the word "impossible" gave way to less determined adjectives, and at last Babette left peaceful Normandy to earn her living as a seamstress in Paris. The work was hard, the hours long and tiresome, and the wages small, but no week passed that Babette did not visit the Theatre Francais. She saw Pierre Egremont playing old parts and creating new ones, until the little peasant girl learned to know him as an actor and learned to understand better the man who had walked at her side through the vineyards of Normandy. She never tried to meet him now that she understood. It was enough to know that, though an ocean of faces separated them, she could look at him from the gallery and remember that once he had kissed her.

* * *

"Vive la republique!" "Vive la guillotine!" 1789 had come and the proudest blood of France was shed in the most beautiful city in the world.

Piere Egremont stood pale and bleeding, leaning against a wall, shuddering as he heard the yells of the mob. He was an aristocrat and his genius was not enough to offset the fact.

The yells came closer, and he staggered on until he reached a door in the neighborhood of Montmartre. The door gave way and he tumbled through into the hall and closed it behind him without noticing that he had left a trail of blood on the dirty steps.

Painfully he dragged himself to the first landing. All the doors were locked. On the second and third floors it was the same, and only half conscious he staggered on to the fourth.

At last! A door was ajar. He opened it and found himself face to face with Babette.

"Is it you," he whispered, leaning heavily against the wall, almost fainting with the loss of blood.

She grasped the situation immediately.

"You are an aristocrat," she gasped. "They are after you."

There was a shout from the street below and Babette threw her young strong arms about him.

"Lie down in my bed," she whispered, "and play dead. It is your only chance."

She half carried him to the bed, helped him into it and covered his face with the coarse sheets.

"Act," she breathed, "for the holy Virgin's sake; act as you have never acted before. I shall do my best, but it depends on you whether they will believe me or not. You act for your life."

Howls and yells from the second floor almost drowned her words, but Pierre drew the sheets aside and kissed her lips once more and it was with his kisses on her lips that Babette faced the mob, when the door was burst open.

"Whom are you looking for here?"

Babette's voice was strangely clear and calm. A man stepped forward and, in his voice was a certain respect for a woman who was so evidently a daughter of France.

"Already Dead"

"We are looking for Pierre Egremont, citizeness. We know he is here and have come to take him to prison."

"Do you want to take to prison a man who is already dead?"

She shuddered as these words passed her lips, that had never lied before, and in her heart she prayed God to forgive her.

A yell of fury came from the mob.

"Dead! He has escaped his fate!"

The man who had addressed Babette went across the door to the bed, tore the sheet aside and looked at the silent, pale figure.

"The citizeness is right! The man is dead," he cried hoarsely, throwing back the sheet, and cursing and howling, the mob rushed down the stairs.

Mechanically Babette shut the door and for a moment she leaned against the wall to overcome her emotion. Then she went to the bed.

"They have left, monsieur! You were wonderful."

No answer came in response to her words and, terrified, Babette pulled away the sheet.

The man on the bed did not move. His face still wore the gray, lifeless expression she had thought the height of dramatic art, and while she stared at him, she realized the awful truth. Pierre Ergemont had acted his greatest scene in this world.

The man she had loved with all her heart would never have to face the guillotine now.

From the street came loud shouts, and the well known tune filled the air that was heavy with sorrow and bloodshed. The mob was singing "The Marseillaise."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE GIRL DISSATISFIED WITH THE TROLLEY CAR

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you please tell me what you think about this conversation between two girls overheard recently?

"What do you think," said the girl with the puffs, "he brought me home in the trolley car?"

"He never had the nerve, did he?" answered she of the turban switch, "and you with your velvet pumps on, too! Isn't he the tightwad!"

Do you think the girls were right to criticize the young man?

Yours truly,

FAITHFUL ADMIRER

NO, the girls were wrong. Meanness probably is not the explanation at all. It is much more probable that the young man could not afford the taxicab which she of the puffs and velvet pumps considered her due.

Most men are generous; the stingy man is the exception rather than the rule, and when a man takes a girl out, he generally spends as much as he can afford and, not infrequently more.

It is man's nature to wish to show not only the girl with him, but also any other interested spectator, how generous he can be, and to this end he will always strain a point.

No woman who is worth her salt ever wants to see a man go into debt to gratify her sense of pleasure; rather let the man be at fault for offering too little than the woman for demanding too much.

Just accept graciously what is offered and you will not find yourself lacking in attention and pleasures. Rather will you gain by your simplicity, for more men will feel they can afford to entertain you. And don't use slang. Don't say "tightwad" when you mean avaricious or close.

DON'T WASTE YOUR TIME

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and have been keeping company with a girl of eighteen for two years.

A week ago she refused to accompany me. She has been cold and distant toward me ever since.

Kindly advise me what to do.

T. R. E.

I WOULD not take this so much to heart. You were both rather young when the friendship began, and it was almost inevitable that one of you should change. If you have done nothing to cause her to be angry with you, there is that much for which you can be thankful.

You regret nothing, you have your entire life still before you; do not waste it any longer on this young flirt. Always be friendly to her, but pay no more marked attention, and I think you will find that she is the one who will begin to worry and wonder what has happened to you.

WAIT FOUR YEARS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am sixteen and in love with a young man two years my senior. My father, however, objects to him, and he and my sister slight me because I show the young man attentions.

The young man wishes me to marry him. His people like me very much, and think it the best course for us to pursue.

I know I can never love any one else, for we have both tried to forget each other and failed.

AN UNHAPPY GI

SOME day you will understand, perhaps, the reason why your father and sister so strongly object to your association with this young man. At present you are too young to make such an important decision by yourself. Ask this young man if he loves you well enough to give you up for four years. In that length of time he may come to see you twice each year. When you are twenty you will be able to judge for yourself and no one can then interfere with your marriage. I know that you feel that you never can like another man. Try this and prove it to be true and remember that "For hearts of truest mettle absence doth join, and time doth settle."

The American Girl's Question

By ADA PATTERSON.

CLEO DE MERODE, admired by a king and the daintiest looking dancer that ever visited this country or any other, who lays claim to more than an ordinary knowledge of life, says, in speaking of flirts of all nations:

"The American girl flirts desperately. Her thought is always, 'What shall I gain and what shall I lose?' "

Could the American girl ask a saner, more thoughtful question? Besides, if she has adopted this as the national question, she has a noble precedent. An old book, not as often nor as studiously read as it should be, for it is a fine model of literature and pattern of human conduct, asks: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

If to a girl's home come repeated bouquets and a continuous stream of boxes of candy; if before her door stands the automobile, the dogcart, or the mere motorcycle, of the same young man so often that the neighbors begin to smile when it appears, or if the young man possessing none of these vehicles swings off a democratic street car before the door and proudly climbs the steps and rings the bell; if he becomes what in the vocabulary of girls is a "hoverer," if his glances are significant even though his words are stammering, he is either in the first stage of love or the final stage of flirtation. In either case the American girl should ask herself what Cleo de Merode calls the "American question." It is a most excellent course for the girl of any nation to keep her head before she loses her heart—far better if she asks the mind's permission to fall in love.

"What shall I gain?" she would ask herself. "Shall I gain a clean-minded, an honorable man as a companion for life?

"Shall I gain a real comrade or only a stranger who drops in now and then to meals?

"Shall I gain a man of sturdy purpose or a weather vane?

"Shall I gain a man who can support me, or a weakling whom I will have to support?

"Shall I gain a man who is thoughtful enough to be companionable or one who is so stupid that he will be bothersome?

"Shall I gain a husband who would be a worthy father, a man of the dignity of character becoming the head of a household, or merely a light-toed cotillion leader?

"Shall I gain a companion who will weather the storms of life with me or one who will be carried away by the first big wave?"

These are questions she should force herself to answer honestly, and when she has answered them let her also give honest answer to these:

"Shall I lose my individuality to a lesser being, a man of meaner mind and narrower heart?

"Shall I give my heart to a man who will ignore it, or crush it under careless or cruel feet?

"Shall I gain the whole world of money and of social position and lose, as every woman loses in a mercenary marriage, my self respect?"

Adopt enthusiastically her suggestion. Transmute Cleo de Merode's criticism into a working rule. By all means, when the young man comes with flowers in his hand and matrimony in his eye, stop blushing long enough to ask yourself, "What shall I gain and what shall I lose?"

The measured match is the happier.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The wife of a wealthy business man was the daughter of a New York policeman. As they grew rich both she and her husband concealed the fact as much as possible, for the sake of their social prestige. At a luncheon several society women of high position had been talking about their families.

"What was your father's business, Mrs. D——?" was finally asked of the business man's wife. Mrs. D—— was not disturbed.

"My father was in the copper business," she said, with cool emphasis.

"What facilities have you for extinguishing a fire in your village?" inquired the superintendent of the office.

Health and Beauty Hints

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Ethyl: Your mother is right in condemning face powder, as it will in time ruin any complexion, by clogging the pores and causing the skin to become rough and wrinkled. If you desire your face to retain its smooth, rosy appearance, use the following lotion and I am sure your mother will not object nor will you ever regret it: Dissolve four ounces of spurmax in a half pint hot water and add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. This lotion takes away that shiny, sallow appearance, and will make your skin smooth and velvety without giving to it a powdered look. Spurmax lotion stays on much better than powder, does not show, and is unequaled for removing tan, freckles and skin pimples.

Rena N.: Neither vaseline nor olive oil will correct your scalp troubles. Keep your scalp clean with frequent shampoos, and use the following tonic about twice a week, massaging it gently into the hair roots: Mix one ounce of quinzoin into a half pint alcohol, then add a half pint cold water. This invigorating tonic will destroy every particle of dandruff, eliminate scalp irritation, stop your hair from coming out, and promote a healthy, abundant growth. Its regular use makes the hair soft, glossy and free from that stringy, dead-looking condition.

Magda: Your eyebrows will arch beautifully and come in thick and lustrous if you train them by brushing frequently and apply pyroxin with finger-ends before retiring. For short, thin lashes apply pyroxin to lash-roots with thumb and forefinger. This makes them grow in thick and long, with a curl and silken sheen. Any druggist can supply pyroxin, but care should be used not to put it where hair is not wanted.

Mildred: Do not despair. You can rid the skin of those bothersome hairs and wear low-neck growns if you get an ounce of delatone at the drug store and with a little mix enough water to form sufficient paste to cover the hairy parts. Let remain two or three minutes, then rub off, wash the skin and the hairs will have vanished. While delatone costs a dollar an ounce, it is well worth the price, as a second application seldom is required to permanently remove hairy growths.

F. R. A.: Dieting and exercising will not reduce weight permanently. The only safe remedy I know of that will not injure one's health is made by dissolving four ounces of parnotis in a pint and a half of hot water. A tablespoonful taken before meals reduces superfluous flesh at an amazing rate and does not leave the skin flabby and wrinkled. A friend of mine wrote me that in five weeks she reduced her weight 37 pounds with this simple remedy. It is inexpensive.

Chorus Girl: Your dull, weak, expressionless eyes can easily be made bright and sparkling by putting in each eye twice daily a few drops of a tonic, made by dissolving an ounce of crystos in a pint of water. It will not smart, but will prove wonderfully strengthening to tired, inflamed eyes. It is a great aid to those who wear glasses, and a fine remedy for granulated eyelids and eye troubles generally.

P. B.: Your sallow, pimply skin, lack of energy, poor appetite, sleeplessness and other marks of ill health are due to impure blood. The best way to tone up your system and get back your good health is to take before each meal a tablespoonful of this simple, home-made tonic: In a half pint of alcohol dissolve a half cup sugar and one ounce kardene, then add hot water to make a quart. This old-fashioned medicine is very strengthening to a run-down system, and will soon put you in the best of condition. As a liver regulator, it is very fine and is indispensable for general family use.

Mrs. H. W.: If ordinary creams do not help in removing your wrinkles, try massaging your face with this greaseless cream-jelly: Stir together and let stand over night before using, two teaspoonfuls glycerine, one ounce of almozoin and a half pint cold water. This almozoin jelly will clear and smooth your complexion, leaving your skin soft, velvety and free from blackheads, large pores, pimples and roughness. For treating freckles and tan I find this preparation very fine.

Grace T.: Do not be deluded into believing that soap is good for shampooing. Even when you make a soap-jelly, the deadly alkali that eats the very life out of your hair still remains. The alkali in soap dulls, bleaches and streaks the hair, causing it to split and break off. I have found that a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water makes the very best shampoo imaginable. It lathers freely, removes all dirt and dandruff and rinses easily. Your hair will dry quick and be surprisingly bright and fluffy. other shampoo preparation I have seen is so good to keep the hair and in a perfectly clean, healthy cond

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCK GAINS SWEPT AWAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 12—Irregularity marked the opening of the stock market to-day. A number of important issues were above last night's close, conspicuous among them being Canadian Pacific, which scored a gain of 1⅛. After a few minutes' trading this early gain was lost by a greater number of the stocks. Reading showed an initial loss of ½.

The following gains were recorded: Steel ⅛, Amalgamated Copper ⅛, American Smelting ½, Erie common ¼, Union Pacific ¾, Missouri Pacific ⅛, and Southern Railway ⅜. The feeling continued extremely nervous and the moderate pressure which was exerted was sufficient to cause losses of one point or more from the opening quotations. Lehigh Valley was very weak, a gain of ¾ being followed by a two-point drop. Atchison lost a full point. The tone turned heavy.

Some traders were disposed to attribute the constant hammering to which the market is being subjected to persistent selling in Berlin. German bankers and stock dealers, evidently taking the war talk seriously, are liquidating their stock holdings so as to have a supply of actual cash on hand if a smash comes.

The curb market opened steady with good strength shown in Standard Oil and American Tobacco. Trading in Americans in London was light.

THE PRESENT OFFERING

In the six months or more which have elapsed since Porcupine Central and Porcupine Northern were publicly floated, remarkable developments have been of almost daily occurrence in Porcupine, and valuations have been established which six months ago were hopes rather than realizations. Nevertheless, today Porcupine Southern Mining Co. is being brought out along the same conservative lines as its predecessors. Through Porcupine Southern Mines, Ltd., an Ontario Corporation, it virtually owns fourteen (14) claims (560 acres), and has under option two (2) additional claims (80 acres) favorably located in the centre of active operations. These claims have the further advantage of being so scattered that important developments can occur hardly anywhere in the heart of Porcupine without benefiting one or another of them. The following letter speaks for itself:

Dated No. 42 Broadway, New York City, Sept. 7, 1911.

To Mr. J. Thomas Reinhardt, 38 Broad St., New York City.

Dear Sir: The Porcupine Southern Mining Co. has been organized under the laws of Delaware with a capital stock of 1,000,000 shares of a par value of $1.00 (full paid and non-assessable).

This company owns practically all the stock of the Porcupine Southern Mines, Ltd., a corporation formed under the laws of Ontario, which owns fourteen (14) claims and has under option two (2) claims, all located in the townships of Tisdale and Whitney, Porcupine Mining Division, Ontario, Canada. These claims are specifically described as follows:

HELD UNDER OPTION: No. 13174, S. E. ¼, S. ½, Lot 1, Concession 4; No. 13848, N. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 1, Concession 2.

OWNED OUTRIGHT: No. 13173, N. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 1, Concession 4; No. 13849, S. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 1, Concession 2; No. 13625, N. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 1, Concession 6; No. 12797, S. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 3, Concession 3; No. 13913, N. E. ¼, S. ½, Lot 8, Concession 5; No. 13914, S. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 8, Concession 5; No. 13918, N. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 8, Concession 5; No. 13917, S. W. ¼, N. ½, Lot 8, Concession 5; No. 13252, N. E. ¼, S. ½, Lot 9, Concession 5; No. 13251, S. E. ¼, N. ½, Lot 9, Concession 5; No. 13620, N. E. ¼, S. ½, Lot 12, Concession 1; No. 13619, S. W. ¼, S. ½, Lot 12, Concession 2.

The foregoing fourteen claims located in Tisdale Township. No. 14128, S. W. ¼, N. ½, Lot 10, Concession 6; No. 14129, S. E. ¼, N. ½, Lot 10, Concession 6. The last two located in Whitney Township.

The above claims are undeveloped. 400,000 shares of this stock have been put into the Treasury of the Company. Your syndicate has underwritten 150,000 shares of this treasury stock at 60c per share, less underwriters' commission of 5%.

The Company proposes to begin active operations immediately. The Company will make application to list this stock on the New York Curb, the Toronto Standard Stock Exchange and the Boston Curb Exchange.

The distinguishing features of the Porcupine Southern Mining Company are Low capitalization, large holdings, favorable location of properties, wide distribution of properties in proven area, conservative financing.

The Board of Directors of this Company are the same as of the Porcupine Central and Porcupine Northern Mining Companies. Yours very truly,

JOHN C. HICKS,
President Porcupine Southern Mining Co.

THE PREVIOUS OFFERINGS

The result of the previous offerings:

In the latter part of December I offered 200,000 shares of underwritten treasury stock of Porcupine Central Mining Co. for public subscription at 40c per share. In the latter part of May I offered 150,000 shares of underwritten treasury stock of Porcupine Northern Mining Co. for public subscription at 50c per share. Today Porcupine Central and Porcupine Northern are listed in three markets—the New York Curb, the Toronto Standard Stock Exchange and the Boston Curb Exchange—the former now ruling at around $1.00 per share and the latter at 77 cents. Porcupine Central was the first Porcupine Company to list its stock on the New York Curb.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Brokers looked longingly for Mr. Odd-lot investor, but he proved to be a rara avis. It is common remark that there has been less odd-lot buying on this decline than has been experienced on previous similar movements. The public seems to be especially wary at present.

Support by the banks is very much like that which had to be extended in the Berlin market last week to prevent demoralization. In Germany the damage to crops has been worse than in the United States, but the crop loss does not tell all the story in either country.

While State street does not take the European war scare very seriously, it does recognize that Europeans take it so, and that compels Boston bankers to protect themselves in that direction. Since the first of the year Germany has taken a very great volume of American securities and these are now being sold at a loss to put German financiers in funds for possible developments at home.

$ $ $

If a European war should come the first crash would break the American stock market, as a matter of course, but it would only be a short time before the markets here would advance rapidly as a result of the boom in business that would be created in America to supply the markets of the world, out of which the warring nations would be forced by one another.

The retrenchment stories which have been coming in from so many quarters have been partly offset by scattered reports of trade improvement. It is estimated that about 25,000 employes of textile mills throughout New England who have been idle for varying periods resumed work this week, making a total of 85,000 workers put back on the payrolls in the last eight days. The curtailment program in the cotton and woolen manufacturing centres has not been entirely dropped, but conditions are much better in these lines than they were a few weeks ago. Most the the Fall River mills are still running on a part time schedule. The textile manufacturers say that there is very little reserve stock on hand throughout the country, and that the retailers will have to enter the market to supply their Winter trade.

Announcement that the Texas Company had reduced its dividend from 10 to 5 per cent. was balanced by the unofficial report that the Beet Sugar dividend to be begun this Fall will be 4 per cent. American Agricultural Chemical is also expected to pay a dividend on the common stock before the end of this year. American Malt has made an unusually good record, so the insiders say, and the regular disbursement on the preferred stock is assured for November. The American Woolen Company, on the other hand, is operating on a scale that makes insiders fear for the dividend next year.

Foreign selling has been a depressing factor in the market. Some international bankers estimate the total volume of American stocks thrown back in Wall street's hands at 500,000 to 600,000 shares. Much of this supply came from Berlin. The Germans are having troubles of their own and have been selling out. Canadian Pacific has been a special sufferer from this liquidation.

Since 1895 the New Haven has paid its 8 per cent. dividend with unfailing regularity. In recent years, however, as a result of a tremendous policy of expansion the dividend has not been earned. In 1908, for instance, the deficit amounted to as much as $2,516,000. The St. Paul is not earning its dividend, and Baltimore & Ohio has a narrow margin of safety. New Haven has earned its dividend only one year in the last four.

NEW KEITH THEATRE OPENED IN LOWELL

LOWELL, Sept. 12.—B. F. Keith's new $200,000 theatre in Merrimac square opened yesterday afternoon and the first performances were given to a crowded house. Every one of the 2,000 seats was taken afternoon and evening. The theatre is modern in every particular and is finished in gold and white. The heating and cooling arrangements are of the latest design and the house is lighted throughout by electricity. The stage is fifty feet wide and sixty-five feet high. There are two balconies and the art work in the decorations is of high class.

"HER HUSBAND'S WIFE" A BIG HIT

Mary Young Wins New Success in Clever Role at the Castle Square.

The second week of an auspicious season at the Castle Square Theatre, amply fulfilled the promise of the first, with the presentation for the first time in Boston of "Her Husband's Wife," a farce in three acts by A. E. Thomas, which enjoyed a long and successful run on Broadway last season with Henry Miller as star.

Those who witnessed the interpretations of John Craig and his company last night felt assured that they had lost nothing by not seeing the original troupe. For indeed the characterization, the rendering of the lines, the multitude of details and the excellence of the setting, bespoke the greatest care and conscientious work on the part of all concerned.

Irene Randolph, charmingly portrayed by Gertrude Binley, is the devoted wife of Stuart Randolph. Her devotion is of the kind we read of in story books, and perhaps dream about, for so great is her solicitude for her husband's welfare that she arranges a second marriage for him in the event of her demise, which she anticipates momentarily. Not that she wishes her husband to fall in love with No. 2 prematurely. She merely wishes him never to be without the tenderness and loving care of at least one spouse.

The wife-to-be is played by Mary Young, and her interpretation of the part is a most gratifying one, while John Craig, in the role of the mystified husband, was excellent. The major part of the play lies of course between the three characters, and some of the scenes and situations are excellently worked out. The scene in which Emily Ladew, the second wife, deliberately makes love to Randolph in the presence of his wife is one of the cleverest in the whole play.

The minor characters live up to what is expected of them fully. John Belden, an old uncle with a delightful sense of humor, is played by George Hassell, who has all the requisites for the part. Mabel Colcord, as Fisher, and Morgan Wallace, as Belden, were both effective. The scenes are laid in the parlors of a Saratoga hotel during the racing season.

MARY YOUNG.
LINDSAY MORISON.

Two of the leading stars on this week's show bills are Mary Young in "Her Husband's Wife," and Mr. Morison in "Jim the Penman."

Majestic.

Lindsay Morison came into his own again last night at the Majestic, for after an absence of six years from the stage the popular actor could not refuse the hundreds of his friends who made the request that he appear before the footlights again. "Jim the Penman" was the play and Mr. Morison assumed the part of Captain Redwood, the detective. The play was selected by the patrons of the theatre, many of whom had seen Mr. Morison in the same role before. At the close of the third act Mr. Morison was obliged to make a speech.

Eleanor Gordon, who appeared as Mrs. Ralston, was finished, especially in the third act, when she rose magnificently to the occasion. As Mr. Ralston, Mr. Melrose was at his best, and added another to his long list of character impersonations. The part of the baron was excellently filled by Mr. Bliss. The minor roles were well portrayed.

Mr. Morison will be given a testimonial to-night by his many Boston friends. There will be a delegation of Mystic Shriners and other orders and something out of the ordinary is expected.

Keith's.

"Between Matinee and Night," a well told and cleverly acted little tragedy of theatrical life, is among the feature acts at Keith's Theatre this week. The bill is an unusually strong one, and was thoroughly enjoyed by the audiences at the opening performances.

Miss Rose Coghlan has the leading role in the playette, and she takes excellent advantage of the fine opportunity to display her dramatic talent. The story tells of the visit of a little girl to the "star's" dressing room, not knowing the actress to be her own mother, divorced from the father. The girl's father finds his daughter in the dressing room, and a touching scene develops as he leads her away, leaving her ignorant as to the identity of the actress. Miss Coghlan is capably supported by Miss Myra Brook, Lynn Pratt and Charles Cavalan.

Another strong feature is the act by Josh Hart's bathing girls. They sang and danced well. "The Mysterious Blacksmiths," Staley and Birbeck, also proved a big hit.

The Meyn brothers, gymnasts, made a fine opening for the bill. Joe Kelsey had a monolog that proved a sure laugh-getter, and he kept his hearers merry. Alf Grant and Ethel Hoag appeared in a comedy act that proved very entertaining, despite the levity and nonsense. Thrills were furnished by Dave Lane and Charles O'Donnell, acrobats, who performed some merry feats.

Ed Wynn and Edmund Russon made good in a sketch that was really funny. Miss Ray Cox, impersonator, met with favor. The bill was closed with the daylight moving pictures.

Grand Opera House.

Good melodrama is never dull, and "The Cowboy and the Thief," which opened a week's engagement at the Grand Opera House yesterday, is distinctly good. It is a play of the untamed West, where all sorts of people are thrown together to work out their own destinies. There is a comedy element in the piece that adds a charm to the stirring scenes of outdoor life that are shown.

Gaiety Theatre.

With the big Behman show, "The Broadway Girl," which opened at the Gaiety Theatre yesterday, the followers of burlesque were given another opportunity of seeing a musical play approaching the two-dollar class at burlesque prices. "The Broadway Girl" proved to be one of the most pretentious entertainments ever presented at the Gaiety, and with Florence Mills, who headed the company, singing at her best, there was small wonder that the show was a success from the start. There were more than the usual number of pretty girls in the company.

Orpheum Theatre.

The new program that was given at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday contained many vaudeville novelties that had never been seen before in town, which proved strong enough to draw higher than the Orpheum popular prices.

Hub Theatre.

The new program at the Hub Theatre yesterday was made up of vaudeville and pictures that were new to local audiences.

South End Theatre.

The success of Loew's South End Theatre is assured by the strength of the programs presented. For this week patrons of the house will find especially attractive offerings in both vaudeville and motion pictures.

Waldron's Casino.

Billy Watson and "The Girls From Happyland" contributed the new entertainment at Waldron's Casino Theatre yesterday. It was distinctly a girl show.

Norumbega Park.

The program in the open air theatre at Norumbega Park yesterday was one of the best of the season's vaudeville offerings. There were six big acts, headed by the Tremont Quartet, a musical organization that always wins favor with audiences.

Howard Athenaeum.

"The New Century Girls" were at the Howard yesterday for two performances and everybody was pleased with the entertainment. Few burlesque shows in a season will show the speed that was discovered in the Century Girls yesterday. There was an olio of vaudeville acts.

Satellite Trips.

The trips of the steamer Satellite to the fishing grounds are giving pleasant outings to hundreds of passengers every day.

Scenic Temple.

There was a new program at the Scenic Temple yesterday. It was made up of attractive vaudeville and motion pictures.

Gloucester Excursions.

The steamers of the Gloucester line are carrying heavier traffic than ever, notwithstanding the approaching Autumn. The sail along the North Shore is one of the prettiest water trips out of Boston.

Plays That Hold Over.

Lindsay Morison in "Jim the Penman" Pleases Hosts of Friends.

Helen Ware opened the second week of her engagement at the Hollis last evening, presenting her new play, "The Price."

"Over Night" continues its prosperity at the Shubert Theatre, where a new week was begun last evening.

Raymond Hitchcock is finding his new musical play, "The Red Widow," one of the strongest attractions ever presented at the Colonial.

Ward and Vokes are making new friends with "The Trouble Makers," the offering that is filling the Globe at every performance.

Zelda Sears in "The Nest Egg," which began a new week at the Park Theatre last evening, is one of the laughing successes of the town.

"The Round Up" is drawing big audiences to the Boston Theatre. This play is a real melodrama with winning qualities.

"Excuse Me" is drawing capacity audiences to the Tremont Theatre. It is one of the brightest plays of the year.

NEXT WEEK'S PLAYS.

The Aborn Grand Opera Company will come to the Majestic Theatre next week in "The Bohemian Girl." This will mark the opening of the regular season at that house.

"Beverly of Graustark" will be the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

LIMIT

Limit is the amputation of "Limited"—the speediest railer of them all. The New Century Girls who pull in here this week are the real velocity kids in the burlesque game. When they strike the rails, it's vestibule service for them all the way. Watch them jump the "sleepers" and hit the wide-awake crowd in a huffy. Something doing from 1 till 11 at the old Howard.
NEW CENTURY GIRLS
Open the throttle—clear the rail—let all small freights and suburban locals be switched on the siding, for the New Century Girls are coming over the road with the long name, headed by Tom McRae, Lydia Jospy and Mabel Leslie. The pretty girls in the chorus line know the road signals all right.
Only theatre in Boston where this show will appear this season.
Our continuous show is just like giving you a through ticket to "Funville."

Colonel Astor and the Owl and the Pussy Cat--and the Virtuous Clergymen

The Colonel and the Owl and the Pussy Cat Were Made to Sympathize With Each Other

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner

Colonel John Jacob Astor is married at last, and free from woe for the time being.

With unusual self-denial, until this time we have permitted others to do all the talking concerning this grand incident in the life of the nation.

There has been much fuss and feathers about the marriage.

And certain gentlemen of the clergy have shown a very violent interest in it—an interest which they do not always show when no fortune of a hundred millions figures.

One clergyman not only attacked John Jacob Astor and the young woman, but in his wild fervor thoroughly attacked his own bishop, like some faithful hound that bites his master without knowing it.

Big bishops, as well as small clergymen, have been interviewed. With one accord they have held up their hands in pious horror because John Jacob Astor, who can well afford to keep a wife, and who had found a woman willing to marry him, actually wanted to get married.

Some of the clergymen and some others have not hesitated to call Astor a rake, a roue, a debauchee.

It would be interesting to hear from the clergymen, now that the dust has settled, upon what they base their charges against Astor's moral character.

They cannot have spoken of their own knowledge, that is certain. For they couldn't speak of their own knowledge unless they had witnessed the misconduct which they charge against Astor. And in order to witness it they must have shared it.

Perish that thought, anyhow.

The clergymen attacking Astor in chorus, with all the enthusiasm of stage bloodhounds chasing Eliza across papier-mache ice, said things of Astor which they did not ACTUALLY KNOW.

At most they must have been repeating hearsay. Hearsay evidence is doubtful, and to base the most serious charges upon it seems to us like bearing false witness against your neighbor. And to do that is wrong, no matter how well you may advertise your own superior morality by doing it.

We are bound to say that in this grand hubbub our sympathies have been with Astor thoroughly.

He has kept his mouth shut, attending to his own business.

He has shown great patience. He would have shown better judgment if he had sued a few of his reckless accusers, charging them with slander, and given them a chance to prove their pious accusations.

Newspaper reporters, to their sorrow, know a good deal more about roues and debauchees than do reverend clergymen.

And the newspaper men know that John Jacob Astor, as men go, is a well-behaved citizen—as well behaved, perhaps, as some of the clergymen attacking him.

Perhaps he is not a white lily, or a patch of driven snow.

But as human beings go, and especially very rich human beings, Astor is a fairly well-behaved man.

What is more, he is a good citizen. He went to war when the war broke out, while many other rich men limited their warlike activities to selling their yachts to the government at twice their value.

And unlike his cousin, William Waldorf Astor, he stays in this country, spends his money here, and uses his surplus millions in important construction work, giving employment to many.

Possibly he is not everything that the bishops would like to have him. Some very useful citizens of America, from George Washington down to Grover Cleveland, have had specks on their characters. That has never been thought a reason for savage attack, especially at a moment when common decency and consideration for a respectable young woman would have suggested a kinder course.

Bishops and clergymen and pious old maids held up their hands in horror because Astor insisted on getting married.

They say they protested "for the sake of morality."

We ask them if they think it would have helped morality to prevent Astor marrying? Would he and the world at large be more moral if it were possible to have prevented him from marrying? Is not the contrary true?

And what about a man's rights under the law?

If Astor had not a legal right to marry it would have been impossible for him to get married, with or without the consent of old maids.

Isn't it desirable to recognize the law of the land, even in matters of divorce and marriage? Is it well for clergymen to set the example of objecting to that which is legal?

It is consoling sometimes in this world to know that others have suffered as we suffer. So we offer comfort to John Jacob Astor and his wife in the shape of the sad but happily ended story of the owl and the pussy cat, which we recall so vividly in the Astor excitement and difficulties. The character in our story also had a yacht, and many troubles. But all ended well.

The Owl and the Pussy Cat went to sea
  In a beautiful pea green boat.
They took some honey and plenty of money,
  Wrapped up in a five-pound note.
The Owl looked up to the stars above,
  And sang to his light guitar:
"Oh, lovely Pussy, oh, Pussy, my love,
  What a beautiful Pussy you are."
Said the Cat to the Owl: "You elegant fowl,
  How charmingly sweet you sing.
Come, let us be married, too long we have tarried,
  But what shall we do for a ring?"
They sailed away for a year and a day
  To the land where the bong tree grows.
And there in a wood a piggy-wig stood,
  With a ring in the end of his nose.
"Oh, pig, are you willing to sell for a shilling
  Your ring?" Said the piggy, "I will."
So they took it away, and were married next day
  By the turkey that lives on the hill.
They dined on mince and slices of quince,
  Which they ate with a runcible spoon,
And hand in hand, on the edge of the sand,
  They danced by the light of the moon

OH MR. SHERLOCKO, THERE ARE SPOOKS IN THE OLD MILL. FOLKS ALWAYS SAID IT WAS HAUNTED AND I MYSELF SAW A MYSTERIOUS APPARITION THERE A FEW MINUTES AGO!
COME WATSO,— BRING YOUR ARMY REVOLVER!
EVEN THE CARPENTERS WHO STARTED REPAIRING THE FLOORS YESTERDAY ARE AFRAID TO STAY THERE AFTER TWILIGHT!
YOUR MEDICAL TRAINING, WATSO, SHOULD TEACH YOU THERE ARE NO GHOSTS!
IT LOOKS UNCANNY!
NO MORTAL WOULD ENTER HERE AFTER DARK!
YET, WATSO, THERE IS NOTHING GHOSTLY ABOUT THE PRINTS OF THESE NO. 10 SHOES AND THESE SCRATCHES WHERE SOME MORTAL CRAWLED THROUGH THIS WINDOW!
YOU'RE RIGHT, SHERLOCKO,— IT'S A BURGLAR, OF COURSE!
DO NOT JUMP AT CONCLUSIONS, WATSO,—I SAID NOTHING ABOUT A BURGLAR! WHAT COULD BE FOUND IN AN EMPTY OLD RUIN, BUT SOMETHING LEFT BY, SAY, ONE OF THE CARPENTERS?
THERE'S A PALE GLIMMER NOW!— IT'S TOO SPOOKY FOR ME!
JUST AS I THOUGHT! SOMEBODY LOOKING FOR SOMETHING WITH A LANTERN! LET US SEE WHAT POWERFUL ATTRACTION OVERCAME HIS FEAR OF GHOSTS!
WHAT DO YOU SEEK HERE AT THIS UNEARTHLY HOUR?
GEE! I THOUGHT YOU WERE A GHOST! I DROPPED A PENNY HERE TO-DAY AND WANTED TO GET IT BEFORE THE OTHER CARPENTERS GOT HERE IN THE MORNING!
TIGHTWADDO!

ELECTROCUTE OR HANG THE LYNCHERS

Written for the Boston American

By Dr. C. H. Parkhurst

We have become accustomed to the idea of negroes being burned alive in the South, but are not inured to the idea of their being burned alive in Pennsylvania.

That a company of men belonging to such a State, said to be among the leading citizens of their town, should have deliberately conspired to roast a negro and should have crowded him back into the flames when, goaded by agony, he broke from his bonds, and held him there writhing under the fiery torture till nothing remained but a charred trunk—all of this is so horrible and devilish that it touches the spot in us where we keep our moral disgust and holy execration.

The District Attorney claims to know some of the perpetrators, believes that they can be convicted and promises in that case to see that they are dealt with according to the rigor of the law.

If that means anything, it means that they will be punished with death.

The Proper Purpose of Punishment is to Prevent Crime

Now, it is important that there should be steadily fostered in the public mind a lively consciousness of the horror of the event, for, although the law is rather an exact science, the application of it is exceedingly inexact, and the results of such a trial as is in prospect in Coatesville will depend almost as much on the condition of public feeling as it will on the facts in the case and the exactions of the statute book.

It is a time when the press, as well as the pulpit, can contribute much toward a wholesome issue by keeping sentiment at a high moral tension.

The proper purpose of punishment is not accomplished by merely getting back at the culprit, and squaring accounts with him, but by its effectiveness in preventing the recurrence of similar crime. And by no means could so much be accomplished toward preventing everywhere in the United States the repetition of such diabolical atrocity as would be effected by hanging or electrocuting all the "eminent citizens" that can be distinctly proved to have been actively participants in the burning, no matter how many there are of them.

There is no more brutality in hanging a dozen murderers than in hanging one.

If there is any brutality at all, it is in the hanging, not in the number that are hanged.

This is not written out of any impulse of revenge. The spirit of revenge is never the spirit of justice, and there was no more glaring exhibit of depravity than that shown by the woman who wanted to touch the match to the cot upon which the victim was immolated.

But not only Coatsville and Pennsylvania, but the whole country requires that an example should be made of these cultivated barbarians sufficiently impressive and startling to stay the current of barbarism that is running so fast and full and that gains impetuosity by its very flow.

There is now an opportunity for the judicial authority of the State to strike so ringing a blow that its echoes shall be heard clear across the continent, and all the way from Ohio to Georgia. Severity is sometimes and often the finest form of mercy. Hanging or beheading half a dozen of a dozen men now may easily be the means of preventing a hundred assassinations or burnings in years to come.

The dramatic feature of such a proceeding would have an unsurpassable efficiency considered as a means of thawing out the frozen moral sensibilities of hosts of our contemporaries to whom goodness is not very good nor badness very bad, and who have not an ethical eye sufficiently clear-sighted to discriminate between an angel and a devil.

One may have a theoretical disbelief in capital punishment. But if, as would seem to be the case in the present instance, an infliction less severe than death will not serve the purpose of prevention, theoretical disbelief ought to stand one side and a form of retribution be applied that shall be consonant with the recognized principle that "Diseases desperate grown by desperate appliance are relieved."

The Final Issue Will Be the Test of Our Civilization

If a clear case can be made against those who are suspected of the crime the final issue will be the test of our civilization.

Had the offences been committed by a lot of ignorant and degraded negroes, there is no question as to what the outcome would be; results would be reached with great promptness and would very likely be accomplished by a series of lynchings without waiting for the more deliberative process of the courts.

But if, as is reported, the culprits belong to the more respectable class of society, their "respectability" will easily operate to protect them from the proper consequences of their depravity; in which case the conclusion will have to be drawn that our civilization is a kind of a veneer, and that rottenness at the core counts less with us than propriety at the surface.

The Sports Writer

By MILES OVERHOLT

I LIKE to know how our team came out and who got away with the game.
Although I am not just exactly a fan I am interested just the same:
But I read the papers and worry my brain, but always I'm left in doubt.
For the baseball writers embezzle my goat; I never can figure it out.

"Smithers jeffried one on the noodle and beat it to No. 1, and Casey at the third pan frizzled on the burning desert half way to home and mother, while Dooley with the slippery elm motioned at the ball thing and died a-bornin'. Gloom as thick as a fried egg hung over the ramparts and the grandstand got a pain. Then——"

But that is the caper that sizzles my brain, urges me on to quit,
And place a large chunk of ice on my head to keep me from having a fit.
I'm not particularly dense, I know, but my think-tank is limpid and lame,'
And after reading a column like this I wonder who won the game:

With the sacks running over, Jonesy joined the airship crew and Brownie saw Dibbs coming and kiboshed the hit stuff right at the entrance gates. Flaherty tried to borrow a platter and was copped between trouble and more at home. When Dubb came to his oats Brownie put three spheroids to the bull's-eye and then all was still. The story was told."

The Red Cross Seals

Editor AMERICAN:

Within the last few days statements have appeared in quite a number of papers to the effect that the Postmaster-General has prohibited the use of the Red Cross Christmas Seal on mail matter for the coming Christmas season. We would be greatly obliged to you if you will give as much publicity as possible to the fact that these statements are incorrect and might injure the sale of the seals.

The Postmaster-General has not prohibited the use of the seals, although he has stated that they must not be used on the face of mail matter. It must be borne in mind that these seals do not act as postage and will not carry mail.

The sale of the seals throughout the United States will be handled this year by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, and the Boston association will undoubtedly act as an agent for the State of Massachusetts.

From a letter just received from the Secretary of the National Association I wish to quote as follows:

"The sale of Red Cross Seals has not been prohibited or restricted in any way except that the seals will not be allowed on the face of the letters."

Thanking you for anything you may do to correct this impression, I remain,

S. H. STONE,
Secretary Boston Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis.
